BOY HAS SOMETHING TO REMEMBER
Little Rudolph Ashton has at least one memory he can carry through life. He has been kissed by the wife of the President of the United States! Here he is while it's happening, which it did when he and two little girls took Mrs. Coolidge some Mayflowers on May Day.

BRITAIN ON WAR BASIS; TROOPS TAKE MINES

DEATH TAKES STRAUS, FIRST JEWISH MEMBER NAMED TO CABINET

New York, May 3 (A.P.).—Oscar S. Straus, former diplomat, Cabinet member, philanthropist and financier, died at his home in Fifth avenue today at the age of 76.

He had been in ill health for some time, suffering from a complication of diseases.

Mr. Straus returned two weeks ago from Florida, where he had spent the Winter for his health. His end was peaceful. His wife and son were with him when he died.

It was said that funeral services would probably be held Wednesday afternoon from Temple Beth-El at No. 4 East Seventy-sixth street.

Crime Is Disease That Menaces Society, Avers Bates in His Acceptance

DECLARING a profound sympathy with the project, Sanford Bates, Massachusetts Commissioner of Correction, today accepted a place on the commission of experts called by W. R. Hearst and his newspapers to make a thorough survey of the crime situation throughout the country.

The commission will study the reasons for the increase in crime, the defects in handling it and the remedy for it.

Commissioner Bates, who is president of the American Prison Association, will be the only New Englander on the Hearst Commission. Among his associates will be Benjamin Barr Lindsey, famous judge of the equally celebrated Juvenile Court of Denver, Col.

The Commission of Inquiry, upon which Commissioner Bates and Judge Lindsey are certain to exert great influence, is the result of the editorial which appeared in all the Hearst newspapers on April 3, over Mr. Hearst's signature, under the caption, "We Can Cure Criminals

The most interesting developments today in the British coal strike, effective at midnight, are

1—Britain placed on war stions. Thousands of civilian workers organized to provide food supplies for na tion. Another army of wokers will keep transportation lines open to avert complet tie-up of country.

2—Troops rushed to coal fields. Army ordered to take full precautions to curb rioting. Recruiting stations planned to enlist volunteers for emergency duty during great industrial war.

3—Premier Baldwin told the House of Commons that as a result of the order for the general strike the government finds itself challenged by an alternative government.

4—With the strike but seven hours distant, the Trades Union Congress informed Premier Baldwin that they are willing to re-open negotiations for the settlement of the coal dispute, which brought about the call for the general strike.

The Trades Union Congress did not, however, indicate willingness to accept the conditions laid down by the government for the re-opening of negotiations.

London, May 3 (I.N.S.).—British industry and transportation will cease functioning abruptly at midnight tonight in obedience to the order for a general strike issued by the Trade Union Congress.

LAST PLEA FOR SLAYER ON CHRISTIAN GROUNDS

William Randolph Hearst's editorial calling for application of the principles of Christianity as a cure for crime was used today by Wendell P. Thore of Squantum in the eleventh-hour appeal to Governor Fuller to save the life of Richard Stewart, condemned negro, who may go to the electric chair at Charlestown tonight.

"As Mr. Hearst so ably pointed out, the law of an eye for an eye has failed," said Mr. Thore in a statement made just before he called on the Governor.

Accompanying the former State representative were four clergymen, all of whom made personal appeals for executive clemency. They were faced with the fact that the Governor had previously refused to extend clemency and had declared his decision in that regard was absolutely final.

Declaring he intended to discuss, if possible, the practical application of Christianity in such cases as that of Stewart, Mr. Thore said:

"The Hearst editorial is in the right path. I believe that Christianity would not take a life in this particular case. The commandment 'Thou Shalt Not Kill' is just as applicable to governments as to individuals."

The Rev. C. C. Somerville of Cambridge, spiritual adviser to the condemned man, said he believed in ordinary circumstances Stewart never would have been sentenced to death, but that he was unfortunately the victim of the demand for stern punishment of offenders.

Still refusing to believe that his life would be taken, Stewart passed a calm day yat the death house in Charleston, eating heartily and smoking innumerable cigarettes. He is confined in the same time this week and Warden Hendry was to announce at a late hour if the execution would be set for shortly after midnight.

83 TODAY, HOTTEST MAY 3 IN 48 YEARS

May continued to make up for a backward Spring today and the mercury soared to 83 shortly after noon, making it the hottest day of the year and the warmest May 3 since 1878. The mercury on the latter date reached 85. The Boston forecaster said the chances were good that before the day was over this figure would be reached at least.

A slight breeze from the west tempered the warm spell. There is a prediction of showers later in the evening.

DR. NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER, head of Columbia University, says "the Anti-Saloon League is the most pernicious foe of this Republic," and wants prohibition taken out of the Constitution.

Dr. Butler and the Anti-Saloon League, both able fighters, will enjoy fighting it out. But prohibition will NOT come out of the Constitution for many a year, if ever.

It took the big war to put prohibition INTO the Constitution. It will take more than a war to get it OUT. Thirty-six out of forty-eight States will not "vote wet" in this generation or the next. But each State may make its own "enforcement law."

JULIAN HUXLEY, grandson of the great scientist, asks, "Will science destroy religion?" writes a long, valuable article on the subject, but does not answer his question.

That, however, is not important. Voltaire answered, when he said, "If there had been no God, it would have been necessary to invent one."

Man cannot live, intellectually, without religion. Even the atheist has a religion, which is intense admiration of his own intellectual ability. Religion is everywhere, but it has changed as men have changed.

NAPOLEON, EXPELLED 'KING' OF FRANCE, DEAD

Brussels, May 3 (I.N.S.).—Prince Victor Napoleon, pretander to the throne of France, died here today. His wife, Princess Clementine, was at the bedside.

The Prince suffered an attack several days ago.

Prince Victor was born in Paris in 1862, the son of Prince Napoleon and Princess Marie Clotilde of Savoie. He was expelled from France at the age of 24 for his strenuous efforts in behalf of the Bonapartist party.

DRACUT POLICE WATCH FOR AUTO SPEEDSTERS

Lowell, May 3.—Dracut police, under the direction of Chief Albert J. Murphy, are keeping a strict watch on the Lowell-Lawrence boulevard, in the Kenwood section of Dracut, to prevent speeding and dangerous driving. Many motorists have been held up and cautioned by Patrolmen Joseph Guilmette, John Costello, Daniel Dorcis, Leo Marshall and Joseph Knight.

The boulevard is a favorite speeding place for motorists. There are many curves in the road, however.

BRIDE ARRIVES FROM SCOTLAND; REJECTED

Jess Klinloch, a pretty Scotch lass, arrives at the Copley Theatre, Boston, prepared to greet her promised husband, Andrew Gillis. Andrew, a shy, retiring youth, rejects her in the first act and accepts her in the last act of the howling comedy success "Andrew Takes a Wife," now playing at that theatre. Audiences have met here and Andrew's dilemma with gales of laughter.—Adv.

COOLIDGE APPROVES BOULDER CANYON DAM

Washington, May 3 (I.N.S.).—President Coolidge today gave his endorsement to the Swing-Johnson bill for the building of a great dam at Boulder Canyon, in the Colorado River district, to supply the entire Southwest with power.

Boulder Dam is the "Muscle Shoals" of the West, and is capable of even greater power than its Alabama counterpart.

Experts have estimated that 400,000 acres of land would be reclaimed if the dam were properly developed, and power supplied to the fast-growing southwestern part of the country. Los Angeles alone, it is said, will buy sufficient power from the government to repay the government the cost of the enterprise.

Assured of President's support, sponsors of the measure will immediately launch a drive to secure action at the present session of Congress.

50-CENT THEFT NETS MAN A YEAR IN JAIL

Tre theft of 50 cents netted Joseph P. Rowe, forty-eight, of West Sixth street, South Boston, a year in the House of Correction today, in East Cambridge District Court. He was found guilty.

Rowe was arrested in a Harvard student rooming house in Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, after falling stool of the landlady, Emily G. Sylvel. She and another woman seized Rowe and held him until the police arrived.

MILLIONS INVOLVED IN WALKOUT
The Labor Congress in closing its session sang "The Red Flag" and disorders have occurred. Troops as well as extra police have been placed on guard in London over the food distributing area, gas works, electric light plants and water works. Scenes in Hyde Park are like war times.

BRITISH MOBILIZE TROOPS TO CURB STRIKE RIOTS

The last possibility of a settlement vanished early today when negotiations definitely broke down.

Troops are already marching into the trouble areas, particularly the coal regions, where most trouble is feared.

Two battalions of infantry have been disembarked from the troopship Neuralia at Liverpool. The troops were under field equipment and were immediately sent to Lancashire and Welsh coal fields.

Thousands of persons comprising Britain's emergency army, were waiting the signal today to take over the labor of supplying the nation its food and fuel, to keep the trains running, and generally to keep the nation's industrial life from complete paralysis.

Trades union congress leaders were today frankly worried over the independent and unauthorized strikes which have already developed in the newspaper offices, fearing that this may indicate that the situation is getting out of hand.

Rumors have gained circulation that the government is planning to arrest a number of outstanding communists on account of inflammatory speeches made during the week-end.

SEES CIVIL WAR MENACE.

Discussing the crisis in the House of Commons today Premier Baldwin declared that the labor leaders, ordering the strike, were threatening the basis of orderly government and were nearer to provoking civil war than Great Britain had been for centuries.

The Premier said that the government had induced the owners to negotiate nationally and without reservation and to propose a guaranteed wage level that would be slightly higher than that under the settlement of 1921. The miners' refusal to consider this proposal, he said, made negotiations on it impossible.

The Premier said that although he had heard of the threatened general strike Saturday afternoon he had decided to ask representatives of the trades union congress to see him Saturday night.

HAS FAITH IN ARMY.

He said that he offered suspension of the owners' notices ending wages and hours and offered continuance of the subsidy payment if the Trades Union Congress could be confident that a settlement was possible on the basis of the coal commission's report. Until late Sunday he had striven for this compromise, he said.

"The only light hearts in the country today are those who either envy or hate us because they seek the whole of democratic freedom entering on a course which is unsuccessful, can only substitute tyranny," he said. "It is not wages that are in peril, but the freedom of our very constitution.

"Everything for which I have worked for two years and for which I care at this moment has been smashed to atoms, but that doesn't take away my faith or courage in my aims."

The general strike, once in effect, will cost Great Britain at least $1,000,000,000 a day, according to conservative estimates.

The effect that such a strike will have upon British industry cannot be definitely estimated, but fears are openly expressed that it may plunge the national industry back into the depression from which it has just begun to emerge after six years of struggle.

LOSE MILLIONS IN WAGES.

There will be approximately 1,000,000 coal miners who will lose daily wages totalling $3,000,000. Other workers on strike will lose daily wages of $10,000,000. Fifteen million dollars a day in lost wages is considered a conservative estimate.

The government today issued an official summary reading:

"The country must be prepared for a general strike in many industries and public services tonight. The government has taken all steps to maintain the supply of food, fuel, light and power for the protection of those engaged in these services and for the preservation of law and order.

"Recruiting stations for volunteers will be opened. Loyal citizens should hold themselves in readiness to assist the government.

Negotiations broke down when the government issued an ultimatum that it would not continue the discussions until the trade union congress withdrew its general strike order.

The congress executives, in a letter to Premier Baldwin shortly before the breakdown, declared they were "astonished at the government's abrupt termination of negotiations."

PRINTERS GO ON STRIKE.

Referring to the strike last night of printers employed in the plant of the Daily Mail, in which all employes walked out in protest against the projected publication of an editorial violently attacking the trade union congress, the letter said:

"The general council had no knowledge of the Daily Mail strike. But such acts, having occurred, it has been decided to definitely forbid such independent, unauthorized action."

The Evening Standard, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, failed to appear on the streets with its noon edition while the publishers and printers negotiated concerning an editorial which the editors desired to carry. The printers were disinclined to allow the editorial published, maintaining that it was an anti-labor article.

GOVERNMENT PREPARED.

"The government is fully prepared to carry on essential services after tonight," said J. C. Davison, Parliamentary secretary to the Admiralty in a statement to the press on behalf of the government.

"Reports throughout the country indicate that the people are calm and there has been no panic. Food stocks are normal.

"I wish to deny reports that the government broke off negotiations for the settlement of the strike abruptly. Premier Baldwin's patience was sorely tried by the miners' attitude and the stoppage of the Daily Mail was the last straw."

J. H. Thomas, secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, commenting on the strike, said, "War is declared."

The Bishop of London has appealed to the nation to remain calm and "be as self-controlled as you were at the outbreak of war."

KING AT BUCKINGHAM.

King George and Queen Mary today left the quiet of Windsor Castle and returned to Buckingham Palace to be at the centre of activities.

The Evening News today suspended publication. Directors of the newspaper ordered that it remain the Daily Mail editorial "For King and Country," which caused the strike of Daily Mail workers and caused suspension of that newspaper. The Evening News employes, when ordered to prepare the editorial for publication in that organ, walked out.

Thousands to Sleep in London Office Buildings

London, May 3 (A.P.).—A government spokesman, talking to the newspapermen today, said: "News from the country is eminently satisfactory. There is no excitement, and everything is normal. Offers of service are pouring in all over the country. Food stocks are normal, taking the country as a whole, and in many cases they are above average."

In view of the prospective tieup, there was a big rush at the stores today for the purchase of bicycles, oil stoves and camp beds.

The banks, financial institutions and big commercial firms were arranging to have beds set up in their offices for those employes who live at a distance and have hired motor coaches to transport those living nearer.

The management of the county council tramways does not expect the drivers to report for work tomorrow, in which case many thousands of workers due at their businesses and trades between 6 and 8 o'clock in the morning will have to find other means of conveyance, or walk.

There is no worry as regards petrol, as the supply in the country is sufficient for three months, but economy in its use is urged.

The government is also appealing for economy in the use of the telephone, telegraph and postal services. It advises that only light parcels be accepted for inland delivery, and that no foreign or colonial parcels be handled.

MILK POOL IN LONDON.

The Board of Trade has ordered the establishment of a milk pool in London. This requires purveyors of milk to place their supplies at the disposal of a committee.

News will be broadcast by wireless at stated intervals in the absence of the newspapers.

London Stock Brokers Fear to Budge, or Prices Will Crash

London, May 3 (A.P.).—The strike situation cast a pall of gloom over the London financial district today, especially the Stock Exchange, where dealers and brokers feared to make quotations in any section lest selling orders be brought out.

The only quotations in the gilt-edged section were the 5 per cent. war loan at 99⅝, or ¼ down, and the conversion loan at 74½, or ½ lower than Friday.

The Exchange market also was depressed, and most of the quotations moved against London. American cable transfers were down ½ at $4.85⅝. The French franc reacted to 143½ to the pound and the Belgian franc to 145.

Scarcely any business was going on Baltic exchanges. The quotations for cereals were raised slightly from those of Saturday. Trading in Maiden Lane was dull, with raw rubber slightly dearer at 24⅛ pence (48⅛ cents) per pound.

German Miners Urged to Aid British Strike

Berlin, May 3 (A.P.).—The British Miners' Federation today informed the German Miners' Federation of the commencement of the coal strike.

The Socialist and Communist party leaders are urging the miners in Germany to aid their British colleagues by preventing the transport of Ruhr coal to Great Britain, and are also negotiating with the Dutch labor unions to prevent transshipment of such coal through Holland.

Vorwaerts, the Socialist paper, says no request for assistance has yet been received from British miners.

Government Will Print Own Daily During Strike

London, May 3 (I.N.S.).—The British government is going to extend its activities to newspaper publishing.

The London Gazette, a weekly journal usually devoted to the recording of official announcements, is to be turned into a daily newspaper, during the period of the general strike, it was learned today.

Members of the printing trades in various British newspapers received notices today ordering them to go on strike at midnight. As soon as these notices were received the government made plans for the daily issuance of the London Gazette, preparing to carry general news in this organ as well as official announcements.

The government will also broadcast news several times daily.

CARPENTERS STRIKE FOR NEW WAGE SCALE

Springfield, May 2.—Fifty-five carpenters in the Hampden Lumber Company mill have gone on strike for a minimum wage of 85 cents an hour and a 44-hour week.

Here's Why and What of British Strike

IN effect midnight Monday, number of workers affected by strike call, including miners, 2,525,000.

TRADES:

Miners	1,120,000	Transport Workers	330,000
Railwaymen	410,000	Seamen	60,000
		Printers	120,000
Railway Clerks	60,000	Iron Workers	100,000
Builders	300,000	Electricians	25,000

REASONS:

Trades Union Congress support of coal miners who, after end of government's wage subsidy, declined to accept lower wage or old wage with an increase of hours of work.

Government attitude: Workers' position is challenge to freedom. Government prepared by troops to prevent disorders and by voluntary assistance to transport necessaries of life.

Union's attitude: "The Premier has declared war; we must prepare for the struggle."

It will be Great Britain's first general strike.

Famous previous general strikes: In Spain in 1917, 1918, and 1919. All industry stopped. Troops intervened, thousands of arrests made and numerous executions before order restored.

In Germany in 1923 troops suppressed strike in Ruhr region.

In Seattle, Washington, for two weeks in 1919.

In Havana, in April, 1924, martial law declared, strike lasted one week.

May, 1924, in Buenos Aires, Argentina, strikers sought reform in pension law and won victory after three days.

Attempts by Communists to call general strikes in Paris and Stockholm in 1926 failed.

KING READY TO MEET STRIKE EMERGENCY

London, May 3 (I.N.S.).—The King summoned a Privy Council at Buckingham Palace today. The King, it is understood, gave his approval to a number of orders in council aimed at emergency measures to prevail during the general strike.

London, May 3 (I.N.S.).—King George came from Windsor Castle today prepared to do all in his power to avert a general strike, and failing in that to minimize as far as possible the effects of a public general tie-up. Queen Mary accompanied him.

The King, it was understood, was advised by Premier Baldwin that there is no promise of any action being capable of averting the strike. Nevertheless, the King remains in his offices in Buckingham Palace and in almost constant conference with the Privy Council.

One reason for the King's return from Windsor Castle is said to have been his desire to indicate to his subjects that if there is to be inconvenience and suffering from the strike he is prepared to undergo it along with the citizenry. It was also reported the King was contemplating summoning the Prince of Wales from Sandringham, fearing that when the nation is undergoing a crisis it is not proper for the heir to the throne to be on a pleasure trip.

The strike is not likely to have any great effect upon the king and the royal household, inasmuch as civil servants have not been called out on strike, and therefore the unionized employes who provide the heating and lighting of Buckingham Palace are expected to remain at their posts. The king rarely uses railroad transport and he will be able to use his autos for such trips as he may take.

The king is understood to have offered Premier Baldwin all facilities of the royal household. The king's motors may be called into play for the transport of food, and it is also possible parts of the Buckingham Palace grounds may be used for food concentration stations.

New Hot Day Record

Rochester, N. Y., May 3 (A.P.).—Weather Bureau records disclosed that yesterday, with a temperature of 93 at 3 o'clock, was the warmest May 3 in this section in 52 years. The average temperature for the day was 68.

CITY PROBES BAD FOOD

While funeral services were being held today over the body of George O. Eaton at his late home, No. 53 White street, East Boston, city health authorities were investigating a market in Blackstone street, after the report of the medical examiner that death was caused by poisoned food.

Three sons were made seriously ill after eating the same food that caused their father's death. Mrs. Eaton escaped their fate by eating chicken while they ate corned beef

HUGE FLEET OF FOOD AUTOS MOBILIZED

Mobilization Centre, Hyde Park, London, May 3 (I.N.S.).—Great Britain is prepared to feed her citizenry, general strike or not.

Here, where the government has concentrated its motor transportation and where the general distribution campaign is being planned, there is great confidence in the ability of the government to maintain an unending stream of food from all the country districts into the great centres of population.

Hyde Park, haven of the unemployed and the one spot in London where the public has been given every privilege from free speech to actually walking on the grass, is today closed to the public. Long lines of motors, ranging from the great lumbering steam wagons that served so valiantly in the war, to the tiny private motors known as "bugs," are marshalled here ready to begin tomorrow the distribution of food.

MILK CLEARING HOUSE.

Offices have been created for the division and rationing of food supplies and it is anticipated that many cargoes of food will be diverted enroute, while other food cargoes will be brought to Hyde Park for the creation of a central store which can be drawn upon whenever a shortage arises in any area. Milk supplies will go through what is in effect a clearing house here.

"There need be no food shortage, if the public exercises judgment and there is unselfish purchasing of supplies," said an official statement today.

Soldiers, constables and volunteers are concentrated here to do the necessary work of food distribution. Hundreds of volunteers appeared at the gates of Hyde Park today, and many motor car owners drove up ready to give their cars for service.

TROOPS ARE READY

The work of protection of property is being directed from the War Office. Troops have been barracked in the coal fields and others are held in readiness at the chemical laboratories where trouble may develop.

All attention has been centred in the aviation fields around London. Large bombing planes will be used for transportation of food if necessary. Small single-seated fighting planes have been ordered to patrol the railroads.

Tourists Are Hit by Rail Strike in Brittany

Brest, France, May 3 (A.P.).—The employes of the local railways of the Department of Finisters have gone on strike, curtailing tourist traffic in the most picturesque parts of Brittany. The strike is likely to hamper the moving of the strawberry, cauliflower and potato crops, for which the region is famous, as well as shipments of fish from the coast towns.

Newburyport, May 3.—Mrs. Mildred Mahoney's shopping trip from Hampton Beach to this city on Saturday evening cost her $300. She stopped on Merrimac street in front of the Pahakis Hotel building, and backed her automobile so as to make room for another machine.

Wants Girl Training Camp to Strengthen U.S. Women

SEES VIRILE RACE WITH HALE SEX

Helen Maloney Explains Plea to the President for Feminine Physical Course

New York, May 3. (Universal)—"Healthy women mean a virile country."

This is the underlying principle upon which Miss Helen Maloney, pretty Brooklyn miss, based her appeal to President Coolidge for "training camps for girls."

Sitting on the broad piazza of her Eighty-second street home, Miss Maloney, who is twentyone, dimpled and blonde, explained her idea for "physically-fit womanhood." She said:

TO AID FACTORY GIRLS.

"There has always been much ado about the youth of this country, but 'youth' has always been taken to mean the masculine gender. Why? I don't know, but I'm trying to find out. Women are the real guardians of home, health and hapiness or any nation. Why should not they be given an opportunity to perfect themselves physically in their girlhood for the arduous labors of the future?"

Miss Maloney especially advocates physical training camps for factory girls who even if they were given a vacation could not afford to take one. Her blue eyes were intense as she explained:

"Women used to have no place in the business or manufacturing world. All that changed with the war. Then, women proved to be the nation's backbone, and if womankind had not in years previous been interested in athletics, that spinal column upon which we depended for the power behind the men behind the front, would have been a mighty weak one.

NO CHANCE FOR GIRLS.

Even children are provided with open air camps sponsored by clubs, the State and charitable organizations, but where does the girl in the twenties have a chance for recreation away from the city streets? Camp Fire girls and Girl Scouts have a chance. Does the shop girl, stenographer who helps support her family? Does the shop girl whose home is a hall bedroom?

"Uncle Sam has done much for the young men and I think it is high time he did something for the American girls. I do not especially advocate military training, but I'm strong for the physical development of girlhood and young womanhood."

PERFECT OUTDOOR GIRL.

Slightly over five feet tall, Miss Maloney is a perfect example of an "outdoor girl." She not only has a healthy, clear complexion, but her eyes sparkle with that certain something only close association with the out-of-doors brings. She swims, plays tennis, hikes, plays basketball and rides horseback and even lays claim to having indulged in some shooting, but she laughed merrily when she told of this.

"We used to shoot with an old ash barrel for a target down at my uncle's country place. But I really don't think that is so important.

When asked about any future work she might undertake toward the establishments of such camps for girls as are proposed, she said:

"I have done my bit. I've paved the way. I can do nothing more until the women of this country let their opinions about it be known. I want to know what the American girls think and want."

"GIVE US OUTING, TOO," HER PLEA

REBELS SEIZE BLUEFIELDS

Managua, Nicaragua, May 3 (A.P.).—Liberal revolutionists have captured the town of Bluefields after a fight in which two persons were killed and several wounded.

The government is recruiting heavily and it is believed that a strong force will endeavor to retake the place. Business is normal in Managua and quiet prevails.

CONFESSING KILLING COUPLE TO GET AUTO

Great Falls, Mont., May 3 (A.P.)—Settmen Schlats, eighteen, a farmhand, has confessed to a coroner's jury at Homestead, Mont., near here, that he shot and killed his employer, Tony Geisler, and his wife, to get their automobile and $25 in cash.

DORCHESTER AUTOIST SENTENCED TO 4 MONTHS

Convicted a third time of driving while under the influence of liquor, George Smith of Park street, Dorchester, was sentenced to the House of Correction for four months by Judge Edward L. Logan in South Boston court today. He was also fined $50 for driving after his license had been revoked and $10 for drunkenness. Smith was arrested after he drove a large sedan onto the sidewalk on Dorchester avenue. On his second offence he served two months in the House of Correction imposed by Superior Court after he appealed a month's sentence.

"CRACKING" PATENTEE NAMED IN U. S. OIL SUIT

Chicago, May 3 (A.P.).—An amended petition to include Joseph H. Adams of New York as a "primary defendant" in the government anti-trust suit against the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, the Texas Company, the Gasoline Products Company and forty-seven secondary defendants, was filed here today.

Adams, described as an employe of the Texas Company, was alleged to have made fraudulent representations when he obtained a "gasoline cracking" patent which he assigned to that company.

MILLMAN KILLED IN CRASH

John Neild's Skull Fractured as Car Hits Tree in a Fog

New Bedford, May 3 (A.P.).—John Neild, textile manufacturer of this city, was killed instantly today when an automobile in which he was a passenger crashed into a tree in Lakeville. Two companions escaped with slight injuries.

Mr. Neild was returning to New Bedford after a week-end in the country. Rowland N. MacKay of New Bedford was driving the car and a third occupant was Henry L. Meckle, also of this city.

There was a heavy fog in the morning and as the party neared Quitticus Pond in Lakeville, on the long Plain road, the headlight of the automobile flickered out for a second. In the momentary darkness the car left the road, struck a fence and stopped against a tree.

SKULL FRACTURED.

The left rear side of the car took the force of the collision and Mr. Neild, who was sitting on the left side was killed. Medical Examiner A. V. Smith of Middleboro, who examined the body, reported that the skull was fractured, the nose broken and a large cut opened over the left eye. The others were severely shaken up, but suffered little injury.

Mr. Neild, who was sixty-five years old, was widely known among the cotton cloth manufacturers of New England. He rose from mill boy to become president of the Neild Mill in New Bedford, which he organized, and director of several other cotton mill corporations.

ROSE FROM MILL BOY.

His career in the textile industry began in Penacook, N. H., where he entered the mills as back boy in the mule room. In his early youth he came to this city and first worked as a mulespinner at the Wamsutta Mill. He won promotion rapidly, becoming superintendent of the No. 4 and No. 5 mills of the Wamsutta Company.

Later he was superintendent of the Coats Mill and agent of the Grinnell Mills. In 1919 he organized the Neild Mill and became agent of the company. He was a member of the Wamsutta and Coats City clubs here.

A son, Charles Neild, died March 27 of pneumonia within a month of his appointment as agent of the Neild Mill. A second son, Frank, is agent of the Booth Mill here.

ABBOTT'S SIDE NOT HEARD

Only Roman Guide K. O.'d by Boston Boy Yet Gives His Testimony

Rome, May 3 (A.P.).—The testimony of the Roman guide, Astrologo, and of two witnesses has been presented to the Attorney-General in the case of John Adams Abbott of Boston, who last week handed out a sound thrashing to Astrologo and is accused, in addition, of having made insulting remarks about Premier Mussolini.

CAN'T BE BAILED.

All attempts to secure bail for Abbott have failed, and since he went outside his hotel on a challenge by Astrologo and broke his jaw and otherwise manhandled him he has been incarcerated in the jail here.

He has been permitted to see no one except Vice-Consul Brennan. He informed Mr. Brennan that he believed he would be able to disprove the charge of orally attacking Mussolini and that when his side of the case was heard he would be discharged.

DIDN'T USE BRIGAND.

Mrs. Abbott, mother of the young man, said that the guide accused her son of having called Mussolini a "brigand" in English. She added that the guide understood little English and that anyone familiar with Cambridge under-graduate language would realize how little likelihood there was that Abbott would use such a word, even though he were excited, which was not the case. Abbott is a Harvard man.

The American consulate announces it is closely watching the case, but is unable to interfere in the normal progress of the proceedings.

Advices from Florence, Italy, yesterday said that the first woman convicted under the law making it a criminal offense to asperse Mussolini had been condemned to serve eight months in prison.

MAN MISSING 5 MONTHS KILLED SELF IN VERMONT

Barre, Vt., May 3 (A.P.).—Frank F. Batchelder, missing since November 14, and whose body was found in a clump of woods last Wednesday, died a suicide by shooting. This is the verdict reached following a report from Dr. C. P. Whitney of the State Laboratory at Burlington. Dr. Whitney found a bullet wound over the right ear. States Attorney C. H. Adams, who interviewed a Koski boy in Quincy, Mass., who lent his revolver to Batchelder, says one shot was fired at a target.

WILLING TO MARRY MOTHER OF BOY

Wilson Resents Attitude of British Consul and Threatens Him

New York, May 3 (Universal).—"Our love was free, untrammeled, unhampered. It was, and is, ideal. But if marriage will simplify things, as they seem to think, and if Winifred is willing—I'll marry her, gladly."

In his frowsy, studio garret at No. 154 East 39th street, Arthur W. Wilson, painter, spoke of the little English girl who left her baby in a Paris hotel and disappeared the other day.

Wilson, a Harvard graduate, was the husband of Elizabeth Brice, daughter of United States Senator Calvin Brice, of Ohio. She obtained a divorce last Christmas.

Two years ago he took up the study of art. He went to France, and to England. In London he met Winnifred Mary Brown, an art student, daughter of G. E. Brown, a wealthy contractor.

He left her a few weeks ago in Paris, and came to New York. Now the baby has been born and deserted. Winifred is somewhere in Europe, penniless.

Wilson, sitting on his army cot in crowded studio, with pictures of "The Holy Family," for which both the artist and Winifred posed, told his story:

"I loved her from the minute I saw her," he said, with a dark look. "And she loved me.

"She invited me to her house. Her father objected. So she came to me in Paris. We neither of us wanted marriage. We both believed that love should not be tied.

"She lived at a hotel in Paris. I had my studio. We were blissfully happy. It was decided I should come to New York, and then bring her here. We intended to put the baby in a nursery.

"So we kissed each other goodbye, and I sailed. Neither of us expected the baby until June or July.

"I didn't know the baby had been born until I read it in a newspaper.

"The reporter read to Wilson the note left by Winifred when she ran away:

"I have no husband and am without funds. It breaks my heart to leave my baby, but it is for the best. Don't try to find me, for if I am discovered I will kill him and myself."

"Poor girl!" Wilson said. "She must have been upset."

TWO AMERICANS HELD ABROAD AS SWINDLERS

London, May 3 (A.P.).—Two men, giving the names of Leopold Buchwald and Julius Busch, but said by the police to be Ludwig and J. M. Busch, Polish citizens, were remanded without bail in the Bow Street Court today on an extradition warrant charging larceny and embezzlement in the United States.

They are alleged to be identified as the former employes of the Bank of Italy in California named Busch, who are accused of committing bond frauds to the extent of $10,000,000.

SANITY TEST OF 3 IN COMEAU GANG ENDS

The mental examination of the three boys held in Charles Street Jail for the murder of Patrolman Frank J. Comeau has been completed by the alienists, it was learned today.

It is understood the alienists' report on Stanley Toothaker, Albert DeShone and Robert Sambursky will be made to the district attorney before tomorrow, when the DeShone and Sambursky boys go into court for appointment of permanent counsel.

ARE MODEL PRISONERS.

If the reports show the boys to be mentally deranged, the court will be notified to that effect by the district attorney. Findings of sanity will mean that preparations for the trial will be continued.

The three youths are said to be model prisoners, readily amenable to prison discipline, and although slightly nervous from the strangeness of their surroundings, display no gullemess or anger.

Sambursky and DeShone have not been permitted to even see Toothaker, who takes his exercise in the lower end of the yard, far from the other two. Today DeShone and Sambursky strolled about the yard with a third prisoner, of about their own age. Toothaker has also struck up an acquaintance with a youthful prisoner. Sambursky was the only member of the trio who did not attend chapel services Sunday, preferring to remain in his cell.

DEFENSE UNDECIDED.

John M. Hayes, temporary counsel for all three, refused to make any statement concerning the defense that will be offered. Mr. Hayes said permanent counsel will be appointed tomorrow for Sambursky and DeShone, and although he expects to be confirmed he does not wish to make any statement until confirmation.

He pointed out, however, that there are several defenses available, including insanity, accidental shooting and self-defense.

PROBE BEGUN IN FIRE FATAL TO THREE

As a result of the death of three persons, wiping out an entire family, the injury of two others and narrow escape from death of fifty more, a rigid investigation was being conducted today into the fire which swept through the five-story apartment building at No. 571 Columbus avenue, near Massachusetts avenue, South End.

Fire department officials claim a carelessly thrown cigarette stub fanned into flame by a strong draft of air, started the fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Addario and their five-year old son Joseph, were suffocated in their apartments.

Jacqueline Devine, a vaudeville performer, 21, leaped four stories from the fifth floor of the burning building to a one story addition and was carried to the City Hospital seriously injured.

Bertha Cashman, the Devine girl's roomate tried to follow her out the window which was picked up by a spectator who was forced to give it up, however.

But the time the alarm was sent in the tenants of the building had been aroused but found themselves trapped in their apartments. Make-mendous start given the blaze before they reached the scene.

Looters prowled through the building before the firemen had left the scene and stole many articles of considerable value. Jewels and articles of clothing were reported to the police as missing from the building. One woman threw a coat from the window, but was overcome by smoke and rescued from the room by two firemen.

A girl known as Louise Dennison of Charlestown, said to have leaped from the second story, was carried away by friends in an automobile.

Failure of the first person to try to send in an alarm, to open the box and pull down the hook within, is blamed by the firemen for the two shift rope ladders constructed of twisted sheets, tied together, were thrown from upper story windows down, which many slid to safety.

On the fifth floor the DeVine and Cashman girls found themselves cut off from the stairway and in spite of the shouts of the crowd below the Devine girl buried herself from the window. She landed on the roof of a one-story building and was picked up by Edward Dwyer, a roomer, who passed her down to the street and into an ambulance.

In a little apartment on the third floor, back, Joseph Addario, twenty-four, and his wife, Mary, with their only child, Joseph, five years, had already met their end from suffocation.

Judge on 'Strike' as Worcester Gets Too Hot

Worcester, May 3.—Two minutes after he took his seat on the bench today, Judge Samuel Utley of Central Court, decided that the courtroom was too hot and went on a "strike." The mercury column registered 86.

Two drunks had been sent to the State Farm, when collars began to wilt.

"We'll call a recess until they cool off this courtroom," Judge Utley said. Court attendants carried in fans and the mercury slowly receded to 76, but half an hour later it went to 78.

Forty cases awaited disposition.

Judge Utley is eighty-two.

GIRL HOUNDED HIM, SAYS PAROLE-BREAKER

Ernest W. Oliver of Phillips street, Boston, was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction today in East Cambridge District Court for violation of parole.

He was found guilty in December of abducting a fourteen-year-old girl and placed on probation, with the injunction to stay away from the girl. Oliver pleaded the girl hounded him, but the court held it was his business to stay away from her.

COMB FRANCE FOR SLAYERS OF WOMAN

Paris, May 3 (A.P.).—The police today are making a vigorous search for persons who shot to death in her apartment Mme. Eugene Regnault, wife of the former French delegate to the League of Nations and at one time ambassador to Japan. Many thousands of francs were stolen and valuable paintings were ripped from the walls by the robbers, of whom there is not the slightest clew, although every department of the French police is working on the case. Search is being made for a mysterious man, who for several weeks had made inquiries of the janitor concerning the occupants of the building.

Mme. Regnault was sleeping with her eighteen-year-old daughter. It is believed she heard a noise in the salon and went there, only to be met by three shots from the revolvers of the invaders.

The daughter did not awaken until several hours after the murder. Other members of the family heard no shots, and the tragedy was discovered by a maid. The murdered woman was fifty-eight years old.

OSCAR STRAUS DIES AT 76

Jewish immigrant, Oscar S. Straus entered his public career here thirty years ago and in 1887 was appointed by President Cleveland minister to Turkey.

Mr. Straus returned to the Near East again in 1924 on a journey of conciliation when, at the request of the Federated Council of Churches of Christ in America, he used his good offices to bring harmony into the relations between the five Christian sects in the Holy Land.

Mr. Straus was a strong advocate of the League of Nations.

November 25 of last year, one month before his 78th birthday, he became chairman of the New York committee of the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia.

His last speech on December 16, of last year, extolled the merits of the Monroe Doctrine.

In 1906 he was appointed Secretary of Commerce by President Roosevelt and had supervision of immigrants.

He was the first Jew ever to have a seat in an American President's Cabinet.

His public service included honors by five Presidents of both major political affiliations, and in 1912 he was nominated Republican candidate for Governor of New York.

His domestic political duties were varied for eighteen years by attendance at The Hague, where he served six three-years terms, beginning in 1902.

His other public activities included membership on the advisory board of the commission for relief in Belgium, of which Herbert Hoover was chairman.

He also was a founder of the National Civic Federation, and author of a number of books on economics.

Mr. Straus was born in Otterberg, Rhenish Bavaria.

His paternal great grandfather was one of seventy notables summoned by Napoleon to discuss interests of the Jews. His father, land owner and grain merchant, took part in the Revolution of 1848.

Followed by his family the son came to America in 1855.

Finding former tenants in business in Philadelphia, the elder Straus, with their aid, started a country store at Talbotton, thirty miles from Columbus, Ga.

Oscar received his preliminary education in Talbotton. The family moved to Columbus in 1863 and two years later to New York.

The father went into the glass and china importing business and Oscar entered the Columbia Grammar School to prepare for Columbia University.

He was graduated in 1871 with Stuyvesant Fish, Brander Matthews and R. Cutting Fish and other notables. In 1873 he was graduated from Columbia Law School.

Mr. Straus began his career as a lawyer in 1873, but forsook the law in 1881 to join a pottery and glassware importing house under the firm name of L. Straus & Sons.

His older brothers, Isadore and Nathan, were also members of the firm.

This corporation later became interested in department stores, and Mr. Straus became an important factor in this field before he retired in 1907.

He gave generously to many charities.

SCIENTISTS ON VISIT TO HUB

Leading scientists and engineers of fourteen nations, including Sir Richard Glazebrook and Baron Forgeur of Belgium, are in Boston today on a tour of inspection of colleges and electrical plants.

The visitors, some accompanied by their wives, are members of the International Electrotechnical Commission. They arrived at the Portland station, Cambridge, on a special train from Montreal.

The distinguished part were guests of Charles L. Edgar, president of the Edison Electric Company at the new Edison power station at Weymouth. Dr. S. W. Stratton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was host at luncheon at his home. A reception by President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard was tendered them in the faculty room of Harvard College.

The women, including Signora Guido Semenza, wife of the president of the commission and famous Italian scientist, visited Wellesley College and motored to Marblehead Neck and points along the North Shore. The party will leave Boston at midnight for the General Electric works at Schenectady, N. Y.

JURY PROBES 93 GANG KILLINGS

Chicago, May 3 (A.P.).—Direction of the special Grand Jury investigation of Chicago gang and beer warfare, which has counted ninety-three slayings in two and a half years, has been undertaken by Attorney-General Oscar Carlstrom at the request of State's Attorney Crowe.

"The inquiry will embrace all the conditions and circumstances which led to these crimes and will be sufficiently broad to get at the root of the responsibility," said the Attorney-General after a conference with Mr. Crowe.

SANFORD BATES TAKES PLACE ON NEW CRIME COMMISSION

Sanford Bates' Letter Accepting Place on Crime Study Commission

Managing Editor,
Boston American—

I appreciate your inviting me to serve as the New England representative on the commission which Mr. Hearst is forming in this country to combat crime, and in accepting the same I will say that I hope very much that the body of citizens so appointed may accomplish lasting results.

I have read more than once the editorial by Mr. Hearst on the subject of our attitude as a people toward crime and the criminal, and it has struck a responsive chord. We can legislate from now until Doom's day; we can increase the penalties for crime and build new prisons, but in my humble judgment we cannot make any permanent solution of the crime problem until we undertake the replacement of the criminal motive with a motive of law obedience and a desire to serve in and for the community. For some time the conviction has been growing upon me that our government must give serious thought to the question of crime prevention rather than punishment alone.

We have given up trying to cure consumption by sending people to sanatoria after they are sick. We cannot cure cancer or Bright's disease by hospitalization. And so we are establishing bureaus of preventive medicine and teaching the people how to avoid disease.

Some years ago we found that we could not build hospitals fast enough to take care of the insane, and in certain enlightened commonwealths, including Massachusetts, were established Bureaus of Mental Hygiene to prevent mental disease.

Now, recognizing crime as a disease and a social menace, we shall set about the diagnosis of causes and undertake a community effort to prevent the continuance of conditions which have been found to induce crime. I heartily approve of the effort of your paper to bring home the proper realization of these principles to the public.

(Signed) SANFORD BATES, Commissioner.

HUB HOSPITAL DOCTORS RECORD BLOOD SPEED

Atlantic City, N. J., May 3 (A.P.)—For the first time the rate of the flow of blood in the body has been accurately measured by injecting radium into the body at one point, and registering its emanations at another, Drs. Hermann Blumgart and Somma Weiss of the Thorndyke Memorial Laboratory, Boston City Hospital, reported to the American Society of Clinical Investigation here today.

The device will be invaluable in giving doctors an accurate conception of the condition of the circulation, especially in heartd isease, attending physicians said. They asserted it would makep ossible, without taking samples of blood from the body, or disturbing the patient in any way, to determine the efficacy of their treatment, they say.

"Because of the inaccuracies and untrustworthiness of previous methods in the measurements of blood velocity, we have spent some two years developing a new method," Dr. Blumgart's report said.

Only by a Practical Application of the Principles of Christianity."

ENDORSED HEARST VIEWS.

Mr. Hearst, it will be recalled, contended in his editorial that our whole penal system has broken down "because founded on the basis of force and violence instead of on the basis of Christian care of our fellowmen, of moral and mental development, of the conscientious performance by the state of its duty to the citizen.

The cure for criminality, Mr. Hearst urged, is not by punishment "but only by education and by a practical application of the principles of Christianity."

Among hundreds of other prominent Americans who read and endorsed the views Mr. Hearst set forth in that editorial was Justice William Harmon Black of the Supreme Court of New York. Justice Black's ringing endorsement of the views expressed by Mr. Hearst included the suggestion that a study of the situation be made at once, by a group of experts selected by the Hearst newspapers in the several large cities in which they are published.

Mr. Justice Black's suggestion, which applied so strongly to Mr. Hearst that it was adopted at once, was that the publisher enlist the services of one expert in each of the cities in which Hearst newspapers are published, for the purposes which have been named. The experts are to study the subject "without over-sympaihy and without an undue bias of severity." Their conclusions will be published as they are reached.

The natural first choice of the editor of the Evening American was Commissioner Bates, at 42 one of the outstanding penologists of America, a choice which was immediately approved by Mr. Hearst. The correspondence which ensued is printed herewith; first, the letter of invitation to Commissioner Bates, by the editor of the Evening American; and second, Commissioner Bates' reply.

There is also printed today a brief summary of Commissioner Bates' public career. Under his control are the State Prison in Charlestown, the Massachusetts Reformatory at Concord Junction, the Reformatory for Women in Framingham, the Prison Camp and Hospital at West Rutland, and the State Farm in Bridgewater.

When the direction of all these institutions was placed in the hands of the newly instituted Department of Correction, back in 1919, former Senator Bates was called from his position as penal institutions commissioner for the city of Boston to take charge of it.

The Governer who selected him for this position of trust and responsibility was Calvin Coolidge.

Bates Called to His Big Job by Coolidge

Sanford Bates, who will represent the Boston district on Mr. Hearst's commission, is one of the "finds" attributed to President Calvin Coolidge when the President was Governor of Massachusetts. Not yet forty-two, Mr. Bates is perhaps the youngest of the better-known penologists of America.

He is president of the American Prison Commission, vice-president of the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology, commissioner of correction for the State of Massachusetts.

Commissioner Bates was called to his present position by Governor Coolidge early in 1919, when, having won his fight to substitute twenty State commissions for some scores of boards of managers and boards of trustees, the control and direction of the State Prison, the Massachusetts Reformatory, the Reformatory for Women, the Prison Camp and Hospital and the State Farm were centered in the hands of a newly instituted Department of Correction.

VERY LIKE COOLIDGE.

Mr. Coolidge's first and only choice for the chairmanship of the new department was Sanford Bates, at that time Penal Institutions Commissioner for the City of Boston and only thirty-four years old!

Only a few years previously, the President and former State Senator Bates had served together at the State House. In many respects they are of a type; modest, unassuming, diligent, thorough, hard-working, devoted public servants, looking upon public service as a public trust. Both are native New Englanders, with the native New Englander's caution: either, however, convinced that the time had come for a crusade, would be as likely to take the lead in a worthy cause as were any of the famous New Englanders of earlier generations.

Both came from middle-class homes and from people of the kind New Englanders like to describe as God-fearing; they are unlike, however, in that while Coolidge came from the farm, Bates is a "city" boy, born in the Dorchester section of Boston.

Graduated from English High school at the age of sixteen—he won the Franklin Medal and was Colonel of the high school regiment—Bates found a "day" job in the Street Department of Boston and for six years went to school in the evening. At twenty-two, he was graduated cum laude from the Evening Law School of Northeastern (Y. M. C. A.) College and at once was admitted to the bar.

Before he was 30 his Dorchester district sent him to the House of Representatives. Two terms here were followed by an equal number in the Senate. Then he was made a delegate to the Constitutional Convention, left the State House to become Boston's street commissioner and in the same year became penal institutions commissioner. It may interest those who have followed the eight-years-long discussion of "Who settled the policeman's strike?" to know that the Mayor who appointed Mr. Bates to the latter position was Andrew J. Peters, Democrat.

Commissioner Bates, it may be explained, has been a Republican of the "regular" or "organization" variety.

EARLY PRISON WORK.

In the Legislature Mr. Bates was not celebrated as a "mixer." He has never been a back-slapper. He believes in doing things, but they must be things worth being done. These traits manifested themselves immediately upon his taking control of the Bay State's prisons and reformatories.

Some eight years previously, the Massachusetts Legislature had passed a law providing for the segregation of defective delinquents for special treatment—to classify, in a group less penal and more remedial in nature than the ordinary prison community, offenders who after careful examination gave evidence of mental defect that had led to criminality.

The law appeared to be a step in the right direction, but nothing had been done about it. Nothing was done about it until, after some amendments, the Department for Defective Delinquents was established under Commissioner Bates at the State Farm in Bridgewater.

Four years ago this segregated care of defective delinquents was an experiment. Today it is in successful operation. The elements of its success are, briefly: close confinement; rigid discipline; kindly and humane treatment; the precision and prompt obedience required by military control; constant employment in industry or farm operations, with frequent change in occupation; sufficient rest and recreation periods; confinement, not in dormitories or cell blocks, but in individual rooms with outside windows; accurate diagnosis before commitment, based upon examination by competent psychiatrists, and, last, but not least, the always present hope in the minds of the inmates that some day they may progress far enough to take their places in the community once more.

Speaking in London last Summer, before the International Prison Congress, Commissioner Bates declared that "we in America believe that penology has made any great advance in the last century it is in the development of the belief that the more we look into the individual's case as that of a human being, study it, diagnose it, prescribe for it and administer the cure, the more nearly do we reconcile the conflict of opinion between the point of view called practical, classical or legalistic and that which is described as the sentimentalist, determinist or individualistic conception of punishment."

Writing recently in the Christian Register on the subject, "Crime and Christianity: What Can the Church Do About It?" Commissioner Bates said:

"We are members of a Christian church. We believe in the gospel of Jesus. Would it not be well for us to read the parable contained in the eighth chapter of John? The Master from whom our religion takes its name did not pander to penalties into submission to its teachings. He taught them by parable and precept, his last great precept involving the sacrifice of his own life. No more can any Christian government punish people into obedience to its laws. In a complex civilization such as ours, we must have laws and we must see that they are obeyed. Temporarily, punishment will deter. Permanently, only good will, education, toleration and the power of a good example can lift a community out of crime into a state of peace and good conduct.

"The church seems admirably adapted to lay the emphasis upon the close relation between devout profession of Christianity and living up to that profession, and a community free from crime. Past history and contemporary experience alike show that the community free from crime is not the one which has sought to terrorize by punishment, but the one which has studied deeply into social causes of crime, and by preventive and scientific measures sought to eradicate the fundamental basis of misconduct."

Mr. Bates' six weeks in England and on the Continent last year was by appointment of President Coolidge as one of the American delegates to the International Prison Congress. His opinion and advice are constantly being sought by administrators and others interested in penal matters both in this country and abroad.

BOSTON EXPERT TO INVESTIGATE CRIME

SANFORD BATES

Massachusetts Commissioner of Correction and penologist of international reputation, one of several American experts who will study reasons for the increase in crime, defects in handling it and remedy for it. The work is undertaken at the urging of Mr. W. R. Hearst.

TRIED TO GRAB COP'S PISTOL

The story of how a prisoner attempted to seize the revolver of a policeman placing him in a cell at the Mattapan station was related in Dorchester court before Judge Churchill today.

Spencer B. Walton of Middlesex street, Lexington, and George P. Emsey of Washington street, Dorchester, were found guilty of the larceny of an automobile and carrying a loaded revolver in the machine. They were each given twelve months on the larceny charge and eighteen months for carrying the gun, both appealing and being held in $1,500 each.

Patrolman Maurice B. Sheehy, doing house duty, took charge of Walton, who feigned sickness on the way to the cellroom, the police say.

Sheehy, whose gun was in a hip holster, released his hold on the prisoner's shoulder, and turned to aid him. As he did so Walton, the police say, made a grab for Sheehy's gun. The officer stepped back just in time. Patrolman Charles McFarland, who was walking directly behind the pair, witnessed what had occurred, and stepping swiftly forward, planted a blow on Walton's chin, out of him.

ONLY DOZEN PICKETS ON DUTY AT PASSAIC

Passaic, N. J., May 3 (A.P.)—Only a dozen pickets were ordered out today by Albert Weisbord, organizer of the textile strike that enters its 15th week.

Plans to celebrate the winning of an injunction against Sheriff Nimmo by mass picketing were cancelled last night.

'Snakes' Eyes' Shy, but Policeman Grabs Dice

Sometimes a frantic appeal to Lady Luck avails the heavier of the clicking cubes, but in Cambridge it brings the police. So when Patrolman Charles McManus heard the frantic plea, "Come on Snakes' Eyes! Come to Papa!" he started to investigate.

He was aided in his search by such weird prayers as "Buy shoes for the baby," and "Nine seven." The "seven" didn't come, but Patrolman McManus did. As a result James Doherty of Carlton street, Cambridge, was found guilty today of gaming on the Lord's Day, in East Cambridge District Court. The case was filed.

Patrolman McManus said the Sabbath peace of Main street was shattered by the raucous din which came from an alley. The game ended abruptly and all but Doherty hurdled a fence and escaped. Doherty said in his defense that he wasn't "rolling," but just happened to hold the luckless dice when McManus arrived.

Medford Fireman Cut at Blaze

Damage of $1,100 was caused today by fire in the home of Warren Stahl, No. 73 College avenue, Medford. The fire was caused by overheating of a furnace, and caught in a closet of the second floor. While fighting the fire, mechanician Oliver Nicoll of the Fire Department struck his hand through a window, cutting it.

WIFE KILLS ONE, SHOOTS TWO

Chicago, May 3. (I.N.S.)—Mrs. Emily Carlan, suddenly going insane, according to police, today shot and killed her daughter, probably fatally wounded her husband and son and then killed herself.

Crash Victim Dies

Atlantic City, N. J., May 3.—George Siegel, thirty, died in the Atlantic City Hospital of a skull fracture received when his automobile turned a double somersault on the Longport Somerspoint boulevard.

PPETIZING METHOD OF BAKING FISH

Nothing is more attractive or economical than a small fish ked whole, but the objections to this form of cookery have en the difficulty of removing the fish from the baking pan hole and unbroken.

Disaster often results in spite of precautions and nothing is more ussy and unappetizing than a oken fish.

Now, however, it is possible to tain a platter made of ovenproof ss that can be placed directly the oven without any danger of aking. Any kind of fish may baked or broiled on this platter d then taken to the dining table serving without being removed om the original baking dish.

An asbestos plate pad beneath it ll protect your polished table. ls glass platter may also be used a plank, baking accompanying getables at the same time with fish. Small stuffed tomatoes peppers are delicious for this rpose.

Here are the directions for the king, including a delicious stuff-

KED STUFFED FISH.

Select almost any fish, such as a ull haddock, weighing two to ree pounds. First, clean the fish, moving the head, tail and fins, and wipe thoroughly with a wet cloth. Then rub it over both on the inside and out with salt. Slit the fish nearly the whole length-ay on the well-greased glass platter and fill until it bulges with tomato-rice stuffing. Don't sew up the fish as the pink stuffing will look attractive and appetizing.

TOMATO-RICE STUFFING.

Cook ¾ of a cup of well washed rice in boiling salted water about 10 minutes. Drain and put the rice in a double boiler with two cupfuls of canned tomato juice and pulp, one onion chopped fine, ¾ of a tea spoon of salt, ¼ teaspoon of pep per, ½ teaspoon of curry powder and one tablespoon of sugar. Cool until the rice is tender and has absorbed the liquid. Gash the fish cross-wise on top in four places and insert little fringed strips of fat salt pork. Bake a half hour in a hot oven (425 Fahrenheit.)

FISH BAKED AND STUFFED IN THIS MANNER IS FIT FOR A KING

I SELECT A FISH WEIGHING 2 TO 3 POUNDS
AFTER CLEANING THE FISH I RUB IT INSIDE AND OUT WITH THIS SALT
NEXT I SLIT THE FISH ALMOST THE FULL LENGTH
NEXT I MAKE A STUFFING OF RICE AND TOMATOES
I STUFF MY FISH UNTIL IT BULGES
HERE IT IS AFTER HALF HOUR ON A GLASS PLATTER IN A HOT OVEN

My Motto

"In all I think or speak or do,
Whatever way my steps are bent,
God shape and keep me strong and true,
Courageous, cheerful and content.

God help me! help me to suppress
All longing for what cannot be,
And grant me means wherewith to bless
Whoever may have need of me."

HOW TO CLEAN OLD SHADES

Very often window shades are allowed to hang in one position until the edges are worn and the surface dingy, simply because no one knows what to do with them. The shades are too good to throw away. They are not really dirty, because they have been thoroughly dusted, but they are just unattractive enough to mar the appearance of an otherwise irreproachable room.

Ordinary dusting, which removes only the loose surface dirt serves its purpose, but an occasional more thorough cleaning is necessary to keep the shades from looking soiled and untidy.

At least once a year take down the shades, stretch them out on a flat surface and after dusting thoroughly, go over them with a wet (not dripping) cloth rubbed lightly with soap. Clean a portion of the shade at a time, rinsing off the soap with a cloth squeezed out of clean water.

Dry thoroughly.

When the shade is entirely clean, trim off any frayed edges and if the bottom is worn or discolored, remove the shade from the roller and turn it upside down, tacking the bottom to the roller and hemming up the fresh end of the material to fasten to the stick. Replace the cord and the shade will be as good as new.

If you haven't written me yet for YOUR copy of "Housecleaning Hints"—this is just a reminder.

HINTS ON CLEANING AND POLISHING BRASS BEDS

First rub with a cloth, slightly moistened with sweet oil. Then polish with a soft, dry duster and lastly with chamois.

The finish on old beds can even be renewed by polishing with a good brass polish and then lacquering with regular brass lacquer or gum shellac dissolved in alcohol and applied with a small brush. Clear hard drying varnish can also be used.

Good Food Values in and Around Boston

FROM THE ALTAR TO THE KITCHEN IS JUST A STEP. Life's not all a honeymoon, you know. Hubby's got to eat, and that means kitchen work—unromantic, but necessary! Keep your hands out of dirty, soapy water with a new mop. Wrings by pressing button and turning handle. Removable head. Outwears three old-fashioned mops. $1.50.

AND WHILE WE'RE TALKING of floors, I've found a dustpan whose long handle eliminates stooping. Finished in beautiful blue or black satin enamel. Hung on the wall, makes good hiding place for the duster. Sharp edge enables you to pick up the tiniest particles of dirt.

THE FIRST AMERICAN Indians called wintergreen oil "wonderful wintergreen" because it relieves so many painful diseases. Chest and bronchial inflammation, neuralgic pains, rheumatism are all soothed and relieved with Spearmint Wintergreen Liniment. Rub it in dry, skin completely absorbs it. Prevents pneumonia and other serious troubles. 75 cents, by mail 85 cents.

DRIVE AWAY WORRY—and moths—with a cedar preparation that makes every drawer a cedar-chest. Apply with brush like varnish; dries in thirty minutes. Can't soil or injure the most delicate fabrics. Permeates your clothing with odor of red cedar that moths hate. $1.00 can—enough to make chest of drawers and trunk moth resistant. Money refunded if dissatisfied.

THE BRIDE NEEDN'T WEEP the first time she opens a can and drives hubby to distraction, if she'll use a can opener that prevents injury. Hands don't touch the can. Cuts lid clear off—no jagged edges—contents come out whole. Opens any shaped can. 50 cents. Easier than winding a clock!

YOUR GUESTS WILL PRAISE dishes made with brilliant red sweet peppers. Rich, nutlike flavor. Used as cups for salads, salad dressing, tartare sauce, etc. Unpeeled, yet tender. Crisp, juicy and aromatic. Lovely filled and baked—more delicious to use than fresh, raw peppers. Special introductory packages includes recipe book of "different salads."

TART AND TASTY is a lemon pie filling. Made of real honest-to-goodness pure lemon juice. Has endless uses besides a luscious filling for pies. Wonderful for cream puffs, cookies, tarts, etc. Saves time and money. 15 cents, two for 25 cents.

NOW'S THE TIME to buy new clothesline. Solid braided, smooth surfaced, non-stretching line. Comes on convenient heavily-japanned metal reel. Three lengths—50, 75 and 100 feet. Convenient loop at end. I'll gladly send you a booklet and a free jump rope sample.

A RESTAURANT THAT IS FAMOUS for its perfect cooking serves luncheon Cranberry baked in a blanket of bacon. Secret lies in the brand of both. Beyond reproach. I'll gladly divulge the name and send recipe, too.

DID YOU EVER HEAR of putting fruit juice syrup on waffles? Just try it. It's gorgeous. Real fruit syrup makes lovely desserts and punches. Also good on fritters, cereals, ice cream and grapefruit. Delicious in tea, too, in place of sugar and lemon. Surprise your guests some afternoon with this new wrinkle.

A MAGIC COVER has been invented that makes pie, cookie, biscuit and bread making easy. Cover goes right over pastry board and rolling pin like a stocking. Chemically treated; hygienic. Don't have to use flour; won't stick. 75c. Saves time and patience.

PRISCILLA AND I have just gone wild about a new electric whisk broom. Cleans your precious over-stuffed furniture wonderfully; good for mattresses, too. Removes cat and dog hair, and stubborn lint from clothes. Father will borrow it for the auto upholstery and his billiard table. Does all the million odd things that only a whiskbroom can do.

PENNY SAVERS—

By using my best powers of persuasion I have secured 100 copies of an especially good recipe book containing true and tried recipes for desserts, rolls, cakes, icings, cookies, candies, puddings, pies and other desserts as well as some extra special dishes. It contains a Hawaiian Layer Cake you won't want to miss and a wonderful Danish Apple Cake. And I must not forget the three-layer Fudge recipe. There are only 100 copies, so better write for yours today.

BANANA BOOK FOR 2C STAMP

Booklets, lots of them—containing over eighty-three luscious ways of cooking bananas, a wholesome, digestible, fruit, that comes straight from the tropics to your table. This book was prepared by the former chef to Albert, King of the Belgians. A two-cent stamp will bring you your copy.

Until you get it, I don't believe you imagine how many delicious things can be made from bananas. There are some salads and puddings that are in a class by themselves, and whipped cream banana pie that I know was indeed fit for a king. Banana cup-cakes too, extra good, banana pancakes. This worth-while book also has menus for small children from 3 to 5 years; others for the 5 to 7 year olds, with still another group for the 8 to 12 years youngsters. Also a suggestion for a twenty-minute dinner, a high tea, a buffet spread, a wedding breakfast, a college spread, Sunday night supper, as well as menus for every day meals and Sunday dinners.

We hear so much about bananas nowadays that I am sure every one who reads this page knows that the truly ripe banana, from which all traces of green have disappeared, is easily digested, wholesome, and full of nourishment.

Ripe bananas are rich in carbohydrates and elements that supply energy, and physicians have been very successful recently in using ripe bananas in the treatment of different children's diseases caused by malnutrition.

There is only one iron-clad rule to follow, however! Unless the yellow skin is flecked with brown, keep your banana in a room of moderate temperature or cook it by some of these attractive recipes which will change the starch to sugar.

CONVENIENT WAY OF CONFORMING SLIP

If you wear a slip with more than one dress, and the dresses vary a little in length, here is a useful hint. Cut the shoulder straps in two, and sew 2 or 3 snap-fasteners—as many as you have different lengths—on the under side of the fronts and the upper side of the backs for viceversa, which ever way you can fasten them the easiest.

You can keep them fastened for the dress most worn, and re-snap them in a second for others. A short dress is so convenient for home or shopping, but you may like a longer one for calls, etc., and yet want to use the same underslip.

HOW TO MAKE SILK STOCKINGS LAST LONGER

Rinse them out in soap and water before wearing. This strengthens the threads but at this or any other washing be sure that no soap is left in the silk.

If washed at once upon removing them at night, they will last twice as long as if in the perspiration remaining in the fabric that rots it.

Homing Pigeon Tires

An exhausted homing pigeon alighted at the home of Duncan Finlayson on Avon street, Jamaica Plain, and, after being fed and watered, refused to leave but perched in a tree nearby. It had a band on its leg, numbered A12MHG601.

Correction of Rhubarb Recipe

By MARTHA LEE

I am afraid that the gentleman with the blue pencil who took three lines off our rhubarb recipe last week did not realize that the final directions were vital to the success of rhubarb put up by the cold water process! Here is the corrected recipe:

Select choice stalks. Wash them carefully and cut them to fit the length of your jars. Do not remove the skins. Pack in sterilized jars in vertical rows, and cover with fresh cold water. Let stand 10 minutes. Drain off the water and fill to overflowing with fresh, cold running water and seal tightly.

ORANGE SOUP WINS FAVOR

The bridge party is meeting with you and you are at your wit's end for luncheon suggestions? This refreshing and unusual orange soup will delight your guests and stamp you as an out-of-the-ordinary hostess.

CHILLED ORANGE SOUP.

Soak 1 tbsp. of gelatin in 1 tbsp. of cold water for ten minutes. Then dissolve in 1-3 cup of boiling water. Add ¼ cup of sugar and set away to cool. Then add 1 cup of strained orange juice.

Next cut several oranges in halves, crosswise and run your grapefruit around each section, removing the pulp. Lay aside the sections and squeeze the remaining juice from the oranges. Add another cup of combined juice and pulp to the first orange mixture.

Season with a pinch of salt, lemon juice, to taste, and if you have it, a tbsp. of orange cordial.

It is perfectly O. K. by Mr. Volstead.

IDEAL BOOK OF RECIPES

Another book that you won't want to miss and of which I have 500 copies, contains recipes prepared by one of New England's most famous authorities on cookery.

You will find yourself turning often to this book for dainty deserts and other tempting dishes.

There is a hot chocolate marshmallow sauce that is simply divine and ice-creams or simple puddings, and some excellent candies, too.

FOR EASY CLEANSING BUTTER THE BEANPOT

If you will rub the inside of your bean pot with butter or the rind of the pork before cooking the beans, it will wash much easier.

A small light onion cooked with the beans or a large tablespoon of olive oil will add to their flavor and make them more digestible.

Hot Water Promotes Laundry Efficiency

If the housekeeper would see that there was always "modest o' hot water"—every day—every hour, how easy it would be to launder clothes when she feels like it—to wash them clean—easily—safely and without all the labor that we are taught to believe accompanies that work.

Water heaters have long since been perfected which will provide gallons of piping hot water, ready for use at any time—and for only a few cents per day. The cost of such conveniences is nothing like the cost you will save in laundry bills, and in addition, you will have a home with a new appeal—the appeal of a convenient and plentiful supply of hot water. Think about this when the dishes are waiting and when you need a real hot bath just before climbing into bed!

You cannot cleanse without hot water and cannot get a good lather without hot water.

Hot water and soap . . . "These are the essentials" says a famous home economic expert, for washing the heaviest blankets or the daintiest of lacy garments.

And there is nothing to compare with the feel and freshness of fabrics laundered in hot water generously used.

Hot Water, Soap and Sunshine!

This is the formula of science and common sense, for health, hygiene and comfort in the home.

The Boston Consolidated Gas Company has made it possible for every household to have a Gas Water Heater installed and connected during May for a down payment of 75 cents—the balance in easy monthly payments. They invite patrons to visit their nearest gas office.

INDICTMENTS IN HUGE U. S. BRIBE CASE FORECAST

Charge $6,000,000 Bribe Plot in Alien Property Custodian Case

Copyright by Universal Service.

Washington, May 3.—One of the highest former officials in the United States Government and two other nationally known Republican politicians will in all probability be named in an indictment soon to be reported by the Federal Grand Jury in New York. This jury is now nearing the close of its investigation into the famous $7,000,000 American Metal-Allen property custodian case.

The Department of Justice is in possession of new and important evidence concerning the passage of $6,403,379.97 in connection with the case.

MONEY PASSED IN HOTEL.

The transfer of this gigantic sum was made through treasury checks at a dinner given at an ultra-fashionable hotel in New York.

In its work thus far the Department of Justice has developed the following evidence concerning individuals who will be important figures in the action which will follow the Grand Jury's report:

1—Proceeds from the sale of $40,000 in Liberty bonds, once a part of the assets of German stockholders in the American Metal Company, have been traced to the bank account of Harry M. Daugherty, former Attorney-General of the United States.

Permission to allow speedy settlement of the American Metal claim was given by the Department of Justice. Mr. Daugherty's friends, however, still contend he had nothing to do with the award.

TRACED TO MILLER.

2—Fifty thousand dollars of the Liberty bonds, once a part of the American Metals award, have been traced into the possession of Colonel Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian. Colonel Miller insists that he received the bonds from "Ned" Thurston, former chairman of the Massachusetts Republican State central committee, in payment of a debt. Thurston is dead.

3—John T. King, former Republican national committeeman from Connecticut, and one of the ablest political manipulators in the East, has admitted receiving $112,000 in Liberty bonds and $25,000 in cash for helping secure the grant of the American Metal claim. King was a political friend of both Mr. Daugherty and Colonel Miller.

King was indicted two weeks ago for alleged perjury in an income tax case.

MERTON'S CONFESSION.

All the Liberty bonds mentioned above were part of the $441,000 fee paid by Richard Merton, multi-millionaire Frankfort, Germany, metal magnate, representing the German claimants, to John T. King and Jesse Smith, bosom friend of Harry M. Daugherty, to secure the return of the $7,000,000.

Merton made a secret trip to America a month ago with Assistant United States Attorney Kenneth L. Simpson. He told his story of the award to the Department of Justice, spent two days before the Grand Jury and later returned to Europe.

As a result of his confession Merton was given immunity from civil and criminal prosecution in connection with the case.

United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner and his assistants who are handling the case, are now preparing indictments to be recommended by the Grand Jury. Several days may elapse before the jury report is voted and filed with the court.

In addition to the three more important personages associated in the case the report may name others who had something to do with handling the $7,000,000 award.

U. S. FLAGS FLY IN BERLIN

Berlin, May 3 (I.N.S.).—The Stars and Stripes fluttered from scores of buildings today in tribute to the 300 American hotel proprietors who will hold the centre of the stage during their two-day stay here. The hotel men are now touring Europe.

President Von Hindenberg received a delegation of nine in Germany's White House, and Chancellor Luther this afternoon will give a garden tea in their honor.

The program for today includes a visit to Potsdam, where the former Kaiser's palace stands, and an elaborate banquet at the Zoo Restaurant to be attended by Cabinet ministers and the elite of German society.

The delegates received by President Hindenberg included G. W. Sweeney of New York; Edward M. Tierney of Binghamton, N. Y., and Oscar Tschirky of New York.

BOY KITE FLIER KILLED IN AIR SHAFT; MAN HURT

Jersey City, N. J., May 3 (A.P.).—Michael Bobker, eleven, is dead and Louis Brown is in a hospital, seriously injured, because Michael failed to notice an airshaft while flying a kite on the roof of a five-story apartment house. "Something hit me. I don't know what it was," Brown, owner of the building, said when found at the bottom of the shaft. Brown has concussion of the brain, three fractured ribs and a possible fracture of the right arm. The boy's body was found later.

BRITAIN AND MEXICO IN ACCORD ON OIL

Mexico City, May 2 (A.P.).—The newspapers here assert, upon apparently semi-official information, that the Mexican government and the British legation have reached agreement regarding the new constitution law. This is taken to mean that Britain will accept the petroleum regulations.

HAROLD LLOYD AT FENWAY

Harold Lloyd's latest treatment for the funnybone, "For Heaven's Sake," and the more serious drama, "Why Girls Go Back Home," with Patsy Ruth Miller doing most of the explaining, are the screen features of the week at the Fenway.

In the former film, this arc of movie comedians has an unusually good time dividing his efforts between the stunts of the big city, runaway motor buses and, for a wind-up, a most astonishing journey in the dog-catcher's wagon.

In "Why Girls Go Back Home," Miss Miller and Clive Brook devote themselves to the task of answering the old question about the dull husband that is apt to overtake the over ambitious girl who gets her hopes too strongly on the glamorous life of the stage. The glitter of the footlights, the bustle of backstage activities and the attentions of the "men about town" occupy much of the film's footage.

DESERT DRAMA AT OLYMPIA

The hot sands of the desert, hard riding sheiks and tempestuous love triangles furnish the thrills in "Old Love and Now," feature film at the Olympia. The story is an adaptation of "The Desert Healer," a best-selling novel by E. M. Hull who is also responsible for "The Sheik."

Lewis Stone, as the titled Englishman who abandoned his home for the roving life of the desert, is superb in his character and gives by far the most vigorous portrayal of his career. Marjorie Bedford makes a gorgeous leading lady, Walter Pidgeon ably takes care of the villainy and Tully Marshall gives an excellent characterization of an Arab servant.

The leading attraction of the vaudeville bill is the humorous skit of Nat C. Haines and company in a singing and dancing revue. Other acts and short screen subjects round out the program.

ANNUAL ROXBURY CHILDREN'S PROGRAM

The Annual Children's All Star Night of the Roxbury School Center, High School of Practical Arts, will be given Friday evening, May 7, proceeds for the benefit of the Center contingent fund.

Dramatic features will include a scene from the recent production of "Cinderella," by the Junior Branch of the Center Dramatic Club, William A. Hazelhoom, leader, and a short play by the Middle Boys in the West Roxbury Children Players, in charge of Miss Blanche Smith. Many other novel features will also be given.

DEAREST ANNE:

Boston certainly has had a week of the strictest of the social amateur sort. The Hasty Pudding show came forth with its jolly youths and then the Vincent Club put across "Come Across." They were both splendid successes as evidenced by the smartly gowned throng which stormed the theatre doors both day and night.

Boston really has style—and I must tell you of a few of the things that are particularly nice this week. By the way, don't forget, Mothers' Day is the 9th.

Flowers and Mother

What is more appropriate on Mothers' Day than flowers—the symbol of love? A mother's heart is filled with joy and gladness when she is remembered at this time with a little plant or bunch of flowers from Penn the Florist, 127 Tremont St. They undoubtedly have the loveliest flowers in Boston and so reasonably priced. Calceolarias, pronounced cal-see-o-larias, may be had for $1.50 to $5.00. They are so old-fashioned and sweet looking, each little blossom a pouch full of love. You know they are shaped like a little pouch bag and come in the most gloriously radiant yellows and browns with red and brilliant orange markings. A Spanish pottery jar which each plant fits into is $1.50 extra and will later make a charming vase. You couldn't buy but one.

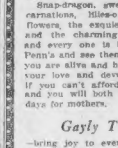
Hydrangeas are exquisite now, too, and little rose bushes look so happy as they hold up their exquisite heads. My mother always loves them. And each year we plant it outdoors later.

Forget-me-nots are sweet and true blue for Mothers' Day and Penn has beautiful big bunches.

Snap-dragon, sweet peas, larkspur, roses, carnations, Miles-of-the-valley, old garden flowers, the exquisite yellow or purple iris and the charming Roman anemone, each and every one is beauty itself. Do go to Penn's and see them. You will be glad that you are alive and have a mother. Show her your love and devotion with flowers. Even if you can't afford much, send her a few and you will both be happy on the day of days for mothers.

Gayly Tripping Feet

—bring joy to every household. And it is most important that they be properly shod. Thayer McNeil's, 47 Temple Place, are offering the most amazing values in everyday shoes for little girls. Only $5.50 are little shoes called the "Rambler," like the sketch. In soft, pliable grain leather of a rich, fast tan shade. These shoes have the famous Plastic features, which will mean normal, healthy feet in your little one. I think it essential that a child should wear the correct type of shoe, especially while her foot is being formed and growing. Of course when one buys shoes at Thayer McNeil's they have a mother will, in fact, outwear every other shoe. And think of this modish, beautiful shoe for $5.50! Really it is amazing. Come in sizes 2½ to 8, and at $6.50 sizes 2½ to 8. The only profit Thayer McNeil makes on "The Rambler" is the new friends it makes for their Children's Shop on the third floor of their beautiful building. Comfort, wear, style and happiness every little girl will have who wears "The Rambler." Do go in and see them. They are splendid and just what she should wear for school and play.



Thayer McNeil's have the best looking three-quarter length socks to go with these shoes for 50 cents to $2.35. Strong, sturdy ribbed lisle in all the new Spring colors. They are really beauties.

Short socks look sweet on chubby legs, and I have never seen more fascinating ones, and so inexpensive; 50 cents to $1.25. Roman stripes, jacquard patterns, numbered dots or clox in exquisite pastel blue, rose, lavender, green and yellow. They are darling and come in sizes 4 to 8½. Fine mercerized lisle. Do get some for Barbara; she would love them.

It Is a Gift

—to find just the right gift for the right person—and Filene has that gift as shown in their lovely gift shop on the street floor just at the left of their main elevators. Here you will find every conceivable type of article for all occasions.

A shop of Boston is fascinating. Comes colored in delightful blues, greens, yellows and reds after the style of the maps of old London. Really very interesting as every building is marked amusingly. These descriptive maps are the latest thing and most reasonable, framed and put over the mantel in a den or library, $2.00, size 28½ x 37½ inches. You could look at it every day and each time find something new. Really a novel gift.

For Mother's Day are the nicest boxes of note paper in fine kid finish with appropriate mottoes and most attractively boxed. Only $1.00 and $1.25 a box. Filene's also have Thompson Spa's special Mothers' Day boxes of candy with dainty miniature and poem of "The Birth of Love."

In this gift shop are two tables of bridge prizes, every article $1.00 or $2.00. How hard it often is to find anything at this price. I used to hunt all over town, but now I come directly here.

Fascinating cedar-lined cigarette boxes have tinsel strips, stage coaches or French prints on top and come with matching match boxes. Awfully stylish in living room or boudoir. Not expensive, either, and beautifully made by hand.

Paul Revere pottery, Mexican glass, pewter, French shell plaques (only $3.00 for a whole pot of them), door stops, lovely French dolls, end of book ends, a thousand and one choice distinctive gifts at extremely reasonable prices you will find in this gift shop of Filene's.

Miss Natalie Hammond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond Jr., writers in Washington but spends her Summers around Boston and Gloucester. She is here seen wearing her mod-8th Spring fullleur.

Paris Stylist and Fashion Expert

—Miss Grace Marie Jones, arbiter and forecaster of fashion for the Holeproof Hosiery Co., will be at Talbot's, 395 Washington St., all this week to talk on hosiery. A cordial invitation is extended to the women of Boston to come and meet her.

Miss Jones is a recognized woman of fashion. Every season she goes to Europe and on returning lectures in the largest shops all over this country.

Hosiery — never has it played such a prominent part. Many a modish costume can be ruined by the use of the wrong type at the wrong time. Miss Jones will advise you about colors to enable you to secure perfect harmony in your ensembles of the coming season. Also to determine at a glance the tones in hosiery and shoes which are correct to wear with all your new clothes.

Paris insists that hosiery be sheer, clearly woven and fit the ankle as if it were made to order. Miss Jones will show you how "Holeproof Hosiery" comes up to this standard.

Ordinarily hosiery is quite an expensive item, but not so with Holeproof. Learn from Miss Jones how to buy it, launder it and preserve its charm. Talbot's have "Holeproof" stockings from $1.00 to $2.25 a pair. They are made by a process which insures beauty and long service.

Don't miss Miss Jones. She is really wonderful and knows fashion from top to toe. At Talbot's you may see her and talk to her any time this week. It is a splendid opportunity.

May Demonstration for Men

Every year during the first week in May the Talbot Co., 395 Washington St., have a May demonstration of value in all their men's furnishing departments. May is the ideal month to prepare with suitable clothes for the warmer days that are coming. Talbot's, therefore, with this in mind, have selected several special values in shirts —pajamas — underwear and golf necessities.

Wonderful broadcloth shirts, both collar attached and neckband style, are exceptionally low priced. Think of them —only $1.00! Everyone should get a supply of these. Also fine quality madras shirts have collar attached or to match and separate at $1.95. Remarkable value at $2.50.

Pajamas of fine broadcloth Talbot's are selling for $1.95. All plain colors. Well cut and nicely finished. Very soft and fine are genuine soisette pajamas at $2.45 or 3 for $7.25. Cool and comfortable.

The men's underwear section has special high-grade broadcloth athletic union suits at 95 cents each, 3 for $2.75. These are special for May.

Golf hose is alluring these days, and Talbot's have just the kind for comfort, nice light weight lisle in a wonderful variety of colors and combinations of colors. Only 95 cents a pair. You can also get 3 pair for $2.75. These golf stockings look awfully stylish a little later, too, when the men wear white or natural linen knickers on the links. I am going to get 3 pair for John tomorrow.

Sweaters—they really seem to be necessary to a good game of golf these days, and Talbot's have a marvelous line of them at $5.00 up to $25. Plain as well as fancy figured designs. Sporty looking and very new patterns. Colors and prices to suit every man. One of the sweaters makes a lovely gift, too.

Be sure and go to Talbot's this week. This is the May demonstration of values sale for the men!

Famous French Beauties

The exquisitely beautiful women of Paris—ladies of the old nobility and artistes of the French theatre—all possess a changeless, indescribable beauty and loveliness that they attribute to "Produita Bertin of Paris." Meyer Jonasson, corner of Tremont and Boylston Sts., are now selling these products in their enlarged toilet goods department and, my dear, they are simply marvelous. You must try them.

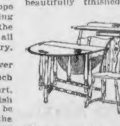
Double chins disappear after a few applications of a wonderful astringent called "Eau Detersive." It prevents sagging and tightens those ugly drooping muscles at the sides of the chin which are one's first sign of age. It stimulates and gives firmness to tissues that are wrinkled, softened or wasted. Use it every morning and feel younger every day. It is $3.50 a good size bottle, and well worth it. It is the best thing I know of in keeping the fresh, ruddy bloom of youth. And away goes that ugly double chin.

A soft, velvety skin is what every woman longs to possess, and she can by using Madame Bertie's "Lait d'Oesype." It is a tissue builder of exceptional value in cleansing and developing suppleness in skins that are dry and coarsened. It removes large pores and hollowness and those tired dark lines under the eyes. Use "Lait d'Oesype" at night and see how charming and lovely you are in the morning. That sallow, drawn look has given way to a pinky, velvety blush. It is $3.00 a bottle at Meyer Jonasson's, too.

Of fluffy, whipped-cream-like texture is Creme Mediana, a wonderful vanishing cream to protect the skin and prevent the pores being clogged with powder and dust. $2.00 a jar. Feels delicious, like "a fairy foam of magic touch." The face powder to go with it gives just that finishing touch to the loveliest. Do go to Meyer Jonasson's and try these Produita Bertie. They are the first and best aid to beauty and charm.

That Summer Breakfast

—on the porch or in the breakfast room can be enjoyed much more fully sitting at one of the lovely breakfast sets of 6 pieces I saw at the Pdine Furniture Co., 81 Arlington St. They are really lovely and only $80.00. Come beautifully finished in soft gray or black, each with gold or contrasting stripes and little hand-painted flower decoration. Moreover, the tables are drop-leaf and gate-leg style, and the chairs are comfortably firm Windsors. The buffet or side table is very prettily shaped, and the whole set is both simple and appropriate for the breakfast room. These sets are made to sell for a great deal more and this is a special opportunity to get furniture of this grade for so little, and anyone who needs a set like this now or may in the future would do well to go to Paine's while these exquisite sets last.



(One gray set was particularly attractive with 4 chairs, side table and breakfast table all artistically painted and rubbed down to a soft finish. Lovely trailing nasturtiums in brilliant colors was just the decoration it needed to make it distinctive.

We spend two-thirds of our life either eating or sleeping, so these two rooms need to be furnished in a harmony of color and thought. Paine's have some of the nicest cane-bottom bedroom rockers and straight chairs. Also dressing table benches, and many are reduced in half price. You would be amused how inexpensive they are. Think of a green and gold bedroom rocker daintily hand decorated with flowers for $13.50! One would be sure to find in Mary's room.

Mahogany dining room chairs are radically reduced. A good arm chair that could also be used in the living room is $16. A straight chair of beautifully finished genuine mahogany to match is $13.50.

These are only a few of the wonderful values I find every week in this beautiful store of Paine's. Do go and see some of them, too. They are well worth while.

The Newest Thing

—in playing cards are those I found at M. T. Bird's, 5 West St., the other day. The cards of each pack are printed on the back with large numbers from 1 upwards according to the size of the bridge party. They are so much nicer for a hostess than having to designate or remember her tables when she is entertaining. These cards are absolutely the last word in bridge accessories. They are the very best quality linen finish gilt-edge type for which Bird's are famous. And only $2.50 per table. Some in nice leatherette covered boxes holding from 2 to 12 packs. Most attractive designs. Number one table would have two packs, a red and blue, each with No. 1 on their backs, and so on. Numbered playing cards make it very easy to always play with two packs which have been used the same number of time and you, therefore, do away with using an old pack and a new one.

Go into Bird's and see these lovely new cards. I know you will want some.

Always affectionately,

Priscilla

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden to Visit Boston in June

THE BOSTON VISIT OF their Royal Highnesses, the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden, sometime in the month of June, is for one of these highly popular and interesting young personages but incidental to a world-girdling journey.

AFTER A SOCIAL progress through several Eastern centres, they intend to continue a trip all up and down several of the Seven Seas and upon various continents. The new motorship "Gripeholm" brings these Royalties to our shores.

THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES have many warm personal friends in this country and these, for the first visit of the pair, are to do themselves the honor of entertaining. Boston and the North Shore figure largely in the program, and functions will be entirely unofficial.

ASIDE FROM THE prime object of their Washington appearance, to represent the Crown of Sweden at the John Ericsson memorial unveiling on May 29, in our "Great Village Capital," their Highnesses are purely on pleasure bent.

THEIR WASHINGTON stay has headquarters at the Swedish Legation, which official and social big wigs filling every available moment of their otherwise crowded time with sumptuous entertainment of regal splendor.

PHILADELPHIA, home of William Penn and the Liberty Bell, is on the Royal itinerary, followed by Boston, of course, and a motor dash to Boston. Mrs. James Jackson Storrow was to have entertained the visitors, but during her mourning observances, other plans are arranged.

FROM BOSTON they depart Southward for a tour of the Americas of the Southern Hemisphere, thence cross to China and Japan, to return to their own North-ern Country via romantic Far Eastern ports, India, the Suez Canal and the Mediterranean countries.

MR. AND MRS. HERBERT BRAGGIOTTI, those much-paragraphed newlyweds (whose matrimonial venture dated from marriage vows exchanged on the bridge of the steamship Leviathan with Captain Hartley officiating) are enjoying European life to the Queen's taste.

FROM A SEASON of voice culture in Paris (both are musically inclined) they are now, with young Mr. Braggiotti at the wheel of their new Renault motor car, touring through the southernmost provinces of France to the Braggiotti estate in Italy.

IT'S NEAR FLORENCE, in that vineyard terraced country where Americans love to roam. As the ancestral estate of Isadora Braggiotti, father of Herbert, it frequently holds family gatherings of the Braggiottis as they return to visit there.

MR. AND MRS. BRAGGIOTTI (she was Mary Crandon, a pretty young Brookline girl, highly accomplished and very charming) are to-stay on in Paris for another year to continue their studies toward careers on the stage.

OFF TO EUROPE to chaperone the return of Miss Loraine Liggett from her studies abroad, Mr. and Mrs. Clarke T. Baldwin (Janice Liggett) are passengers aboard the now outbound steamship Conte Rosso.

MISS LIGGETT, due for her social presentation next season, is one of the greatly accomplished younger sportswomen whose horses usually bring home a ribbon or two when ever entered in amateur meets.

IN FACT the names of Baldwin and Liggett are well known wherever the gentlemen riders and their thoroughbreds foregather. It was a Liggett horse, Sir Pet, with Leigh Liggett up, that did so well in the touch and go class at the Riding Club's recent show.

OTHER TRANS-ATLANTIC travelers Europe-bound on the Conte Rosso are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Emerson Proctor, 3d (she was Margaret Olivia Flint of Washington).

THE PROCTOR-FLINT marriage was a Washington affair of pomp and circumstance to which flocked the Proctors, the Rices, the Mandells and others of the bride-groom's family connection.

MRS. O. H. P. BELMONT, in Newport for the week-end on what is her first visit in two years, put up at Pine Lodge in Catherine street while inspecting Marble House, her Bellevue avenue mansion.

HER COMPANION to Newport is Mrs. Charles Moran, owner of a Newport estate in Red Cross avenue. Mrs. Belmont is soon off to England to be godmother for her great-grandson, first son and heir of the Marquis of Blandford.

NEWPORT FIGURES in the Summer plans of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Cameron Church, Jr., the former Muriel Vanderbilt having flitted to Newport to stay at the Muenchinger-King and look about for a suitable villa.

YOUNG MRS. CHURCH, social celebrity of New York and (more recently) Boston, is a Newport figure equally popular and beloved where the frivolous set is seen and in those distinctly plebian perilus of the native, two sets which might indeed inhabit separate globes, so divided are their interests.

MRS. JOSEPH WASHINGTON FRAZER, who was Lucile J. Frost, is a recent Muenchinger-King guest while engaged in the pleasant task of house hunting for a Summer villa. The social clans of the City-by-the-sea are slowly gathering.

GALWAY LADIES PLAN NOVEL MAY PARTY

Whist and Old-Time Dances Thursday; News of the Irish Societies

By JAMES WALSH.

Novel features are planned for the annual May party of the Galway Ladies' Association in Jackson and O'Connell halls, Hibernian Building, Dudley street, on Thursday evening. Many prominent people will attend. Plans for the affair were completed at the regular meeting of the association in Hibernian Building last night. Whist will be played in Jackson Hall from 8:30 to 10:30, and dancing in O'Connell Hall from 8:30 to 11:30 p. m. Old-time dances, as well as the modern style, will be in vogue.

Miss Nora E. Foley, president of the association, is co-operating with a committee composed of Mrs. Bridget Grealish, chairman; Miss Nellie Mitchell, secretary; Miss Delia Cummings, treasurer; Mrs. Julia Mesmer, Mrs. Margaret Brennan, Mrs. Catherine Feeley, Mrs. Della Walsh, Mrs. Della O'Malley, Mrs. Della Joyce, Miss Helen Hanley, Miss Della Gill, Miss Nellie Moore, Miss Winifred McGrath, Miss Margaret Brennan and Miss Delia Brown.

President Bartholomew J. Fahey of the County Galway Men's Association initiated several new members at the regular meeting of the association last night in John Boyle O'Reilly Hall, Hibernian Building. The committee in charge of the recent ball for the Father Michael Griffin Memorial reported the affair a great success. The following committee was appointed to plan for the annual harbor outing in August, in conjunction with the members of the Galway Ladies' Association.

Pre-ident Fahey, Michael H. Cusick, Thomas F. Flaherty, John J. Kelly, Bernard F. Fahey, Joseph P. Walsh, John F. Grady, Richard McGrath and John J. Fahey.

Plans for the testimonial ball for John J. Lancaster of the County Wexford Association, who has been ill for a long time, are rapidly approaching completion. The affair will be held in Hibernian Building, May 16. Mr. Lancaster is a former vice-president of the Central Council of Irish County Associations and a former president of the Gaelic Athletic Association of Massachusetts.

The presidents of the various Irish County Associations of the Gaelic Athletic Association, the Irish National Foresters and other Irish societies will have a special meeting in connection with the testimonial in Hibernian Building, Roxbury, on Wednesday evening at 8:30. The committee in charge includes John J. Hickey of the County Wexford Association; chairman; James Galvin of the G. A. A., vice-chairman; Thomas Clark of the Irish National Foresters, treasurer; Frank M. Ternan, secretary, and a large number of the officers and members of the various organizations.

The annual May party of the County Cavan Association will be held in O'Connell Hall, Hibernian Building, on Tuesday evening, May 25. The committee in charge of the arrangements includes John McDonald, president; Michael McGrail, chairman; Miss Helen Shannon, secretary; Myles McLaughlin, treasurer; Mrs. Charles Shannon, B. H. Wynne and Patrick Wynne.

REP. COYNE TO BACK HERO PENSIONS

Legislator Approves Boston Evening American Police-Firemen Measure

By FRANCIS X. COYNE,
Member House of Representatives from Dorchester.

The Casey-Thomas-Boston Evening American hero pension bill is one that should commend itself to every member of the General Court. It is based on humane principles. It is drawn on lines of fair play and justice.

Such a law would prove an incentive to those public servants who protect life and property and assure them that, if killed on duty, their dependents will be adequately compensated. The families of such men should not become objects of charity.

When a policeman or fireman leaves his loved ones to report for duty he never knows whether he will ever see them again. The wail of a burning building might crush the firemen to death or the bullet of a bandit end the life of a policeman. In the role of public servants, the members of both of these highly important departments must court danger at any hour. Therefore the families of such men should be rewarded when they give up their lives in service to the community.

The Boston Evening American is to be commended for the initiative it has shown in supporting so worthy a measure and for its active interest in the welfare of policemen and firemen and their families.

DICTATOR FOR POLAND LOOMS IN CABINET CRISIS

London, May 3 (I.N.S.).—Possibility of a dictatorship for Poland under General Pilsudski, war hero, was being discussed in diplomatic circles here today. Inability of any cabinet to muster enough power to remain in office has given rise to what is described as "a real need for a dictator."

The Polish cabinet resigned last week. Efforts to set up a new government have been unavailing.

For Hero Pension

REP. COYNE

Dorchester Legislator says dependents of police and firemen should not become objects of charity.

DISTANCE NOT C. M. T. C. BAN

Washington, May 3 (A.P.).—Equal opportunity will be given this Summer to all applicants for admission to the Citizens' Military Training Camps, regardless of distances between their places of residence and the camp sites.

Heretofore applicants who live at any considerable distance from a camp were rejected for the reason that the War Department lacked funds for transportation.

The increase of $212,233 over last year's transportation allowances has made possible the opening of the camps to all applicants.

100,000 WOMEN HAREM SLAVES, SAYS BISHOP

Christian Widows and Girls Imprisoned by Turks Alleges Manning

New York, May 3 (A.P.).—More than 100,000 Christian women and girls are held captive in Turkish harems, in the belief of Bishop William T. Manning.

Ratification of the Lausanne Treaty, he told the Girls' Friendly Society at its annual meeting yesterday, would mean that "the United States assents in silence to these abominations."

Quoting from a pamphlet made public yesterday by the American committee opposed to the Lausanne Treaty, he declared that the figures as to the Christian women and girls were contained in official reports to the League of Nations.

"These women, whose husbands have been murdered, are held by force among the wives of the murderers," he declared. "Little girls whose Christian parents have been massacred are for sale to any man who will buy, and are subject wholly to the will of their purchasers.

"Christian girls, as refined and educated as any in America with no fathers and brothers left to protect them, are living in slavery far worse than death.

"The record establishes the hitherto little known fact of which Kemal and his associates boast, that Kemal has actually destroyed a large number of Christians and has done infinitely more toward the extirpation of Christians in the Near East than any Turkish regime since the birth of the Ottoman rule in 1258."

Bishop Manning argued that the treaty surrendered admittedly American rights in the face of the Kemalists having sacked and burned the Christian quarters of Smyrna, butchering 100,000 helpless Christian civilians, and expelling 300,000 just two months before the treaty was negotiated.

The pamphlet "Kemal's Slave Market and the Lausanne Treaty" charges that the present Turkish government is engaged in a systematic plot, "through massacres and confiscations, to eliminate the Christian population of Turkey."

A Startling and Attractive New Fountain Pen

Waterman's newest fountain pen is called Ripple-Rubber. The material is hard rubber—the most lasting and satisfying of all pen materials. The color design is a series of cardinal and black ripples resembling in design the marks left by wavelets on the sea-shore. Although startling when it catches the eye, it never becomes tiresome or monotonous. The effect is original and beautiful, exciting admiration whenever seen.

Ripple-Rubber

Every Ripple-Rubber pen is made with spun metal lip-guard which prevents cracking; with Waterman's patented pocket clip that holds the pen securely in the pocket; Waterman's unequaled filling device that automatically locks and will not get out of order; Waterman's patented spoon-feed that guarantees immediate and even flow of ink. Like all Waterman's, this Ripple-Rubber Pen may be fitted with a pen point exactly to your liking.

Like all Waterman's, this Ripple-Rubber Pen is guaranteed to give perfect service without time limit.

2 BOYS SEIZED AFTER HOLDUP

Four South Boston youths were taken into custody today by Sergt Eugene Wallingford and Patrolman John Feeney, following the hdup and robbery of Frank N. Gallagher of No. 10 Dawes street, Dorchester, at Dorchester street and Dale street, South Boston.

Patrolman Feeney heard Gallagher's cries and rushed to his assistance. Gallagher told him that while walking along Dorchester street four men had jumped from a doorway, held him up and robbed him of $37.80.

Feeney searched the neighborhood without success, and then with the assistance of Sergeant Wallingford in the police flivver, rounded up the four youths as suspects.

In court each pleaded not guilty to robbery and was held in $1,000 for hearing May 10.

HEIRESS SLAIN IN LOVE SPAT

Rochester, N. Y., May 3 (I.N.S.).—Jealousy arising from spurned love was believed by police today to be the motive for the slaying of Mrs. Eva Thelen, 38, divorcee, and Brooklyn heiress, who was shot to death as she sat on a wall with a young man.

Vito Sillo, twenty-three, of Portchester, N. Y., is held in connection with her death. Sillo asked Mrs. Thelen twice a few hours before her death to meet him but was rebuffed, according to Dr. Amos O. Squire, medical examiner of Westchester County. Sillo is reported to have "kept company" with Mrs. Thelen for a year. He denied being near the scene of the crime.

Vita Summa, twenty-three, of Portchester, who was seated on the wall with Mrs. Thlen, is held as a material witness.

'Bouncing Baby'

HIS ROUTE DOWN

George Oskian, 2, of No. 17 Linden street, South Boston, is actually "a bouncing baby." He proved it when he took this route in a 25-foot plunge from an attic window, bouncing off the roof and landed on the earth unhurt, at the home of John M. Bonjonmian, No. 17 Hinckley street, Dorchester.

MANIAC THUG'S HUNTERS TOLD 'TO KILL'

Blackstone Valley Terror Is Known to Be Quick on Gunfire Himself

Still at large after eluding police posses in Massachusetts and Rhode Island for more than two days, Arthur Rembiad, escaped madman, who is believed to be one of a gang that shot its way through three Rhode Island towns, was sought today in Summer camps in the Blackstone River valley.

"Shoot to kill" orders were given to the police searching for him, because Rembiad's own quickness in shooting when cornered.

Like a will o' the wisp, the twenty-two-year-old youth who escaped from the Rhode Island Insane Hospital is flitting from a place near the border, his latest exploit being at Uxbridge, where he is thought to be the man who shot three times at an Uxbridge resident.

He has been seen several times in the vicinity of his alleged shootings, but every time has fled through the woods too swiftly for his chance discoverers. Each time his flight was prefaced with derisive gesture at his pursuers.

The superintendent of the insane hospital publicly stamped Rembiad as dangerous today to offset reports that he was harmless. Police declared an impression among country-folk who know him that he is harmless has prevented his capture.

Rembiad was placed in the hospital two years ago after a savage gunfight with officers in a Woonsocket lumber yard.

LUMBAGO KEEPING EUGENE DEBS HOME

Terre Haute, Ind., May 3 (I.N.S.).—Eugene V. Debs, thrice candidate for President of the United States on the Socialist ticket, told International News Service today that reports he had suffered a physical breakdown were "greatly exaggerated."

"I've been suffering from an attack of lumbago, an outgrowth of seasickness during my trip back from Bermuda, but am greatly improved now," he said. "I didn't go to Pittsburgh to attend the Socialist convention because I feared the trip by rail would aggravate the pain."

TROOPERS FACE JAIL IN MAINE SHERIFF TIFF

Augusta, Me., May 3.—With four deputies of former Sheriff Henry F. Cummings facing arraignment in court for obstructing State police, counsel for the impeached officials today threatened counter-proceedings against the troopers for battering down the jail doors.

The doors were forced on Saturday, when Cummings refused to surrender the office, and, as a result, John M. Eastman of Benton, appointed by Governor Brewster as Cummings' successor, was firmly established as sheriff today.

State troopers who formed the storming party, under Chief Field, arrested four of Cummings' deputies for obstructing them. Former Judge Joseph E. F. Connolly, counsel for Cummings, threatened criminal and civil proceedings against the State police who took part in the "assault."

It was expected the deputies would be asked to identify the men who arrested them, during court proceedings today. Connolly said he would swear out warrants for the troopers.

Although Eastman qualified early last week as Cummings' successor, the latter refused to recognize him legally, although welcoming him to the jail as an old friend. When Cummings' deputies had been arrested Saturday the newly installed sheriff reversed matters by offering his predecessor the hospitality of the jail.

MAN WHIRLED TO DEATH BY PEABODY PLANT BELT

Peabody, May 3 (A.P.).—John W. Holden, aged 35, of Peabody, was instantly killed at the A. C. Lawrence leather company plant at Peabody today. Holden a belt repair man, was standing on a ladder in the cellar of the building I. His clothes became entangled in the belting and he was whirled to instant death. Two legs and one arm were torn off. Holden is survived by a wife and two daughters.

The Letters of Queen Victoria

Human Appeal in Private Documents of Greatest Woman Ruler

"DEAR LITTLE WILLIAM"

Queen Victoria writes a prayerful letter asking that the future Kaiser grow up liberal-minded. Photo shows the exiled German Emperor on his seventh birthday.

BEHOLD a great and righteous Queen casting pride and indignation aside and figuratively prostrating herself on her knees before the King whom she holds guilty of an infamy.

History affords no more dramatic scene than that portrayed in the Queen's own words in today's instalment of "The Letters of Queen Victoria," which the Boston Evening American is publishing daily by authority of King George of England.

Cloaking her contempt for the "atrocious" conduct of King William I. of Prussia and his Iron Chancellor, Bismarck, in planning the violent annexation of the Schleswig-Holstein duchies, which have been wrested from Denmark for the avowed purpose of making them independent members of the Confederation of German States, Victoria writes a fervent plea to the King of Prussia, addressing him as "Beloved Brother" and abjuring him by all they both hold sacred to prevent the fratricidal war between the two Germanic powers, Austria and Prussia, that the Bismarckian strategy must entail.

She appeals to the King's better self and urges him to free himself from the sinister grip of his Chancellor. But the King refuses to admit he is not his own master.

War is declared at the behest of Bismarck after the Prussians drive the Austrian troops out of Holstein. The most important of the German States stand by Austria and her primacy in the Federation, but they are ill-prepared for war and are quickly overrun by the Prussians. The main Austrian army is heavily defeated at Koniggratz, and Austria asks for an armistice.

Prussia gains not only Schleswig and Holstein, but the ascendancy over a new German Union, from which Austria is barred. Napoleon III. is mediator for Bismarck.

Napoleon, who had refused to help prevent the war, hoping for greater reward after the conflict, now comes forward and asks for the Rhine frontier for France as compensation for the aggrandizement of Prussia. Bismarck bluntly refuses, and Napoleon quits.

The Queen's letter praying for liberal mindedness for the later Emperor William will be appreciated by students of today.

Extract From the Queen's Journal.

OSBORNE, 27th Jan., 1866.

Dear little William's birthday (seventh birthday of the future German Emperor, William II.). May God preserve him, and may he grow up good, clever, and liberal-minded in his views, worthy of his beloved Grandpapa, who was so anxious about him, and that he should not grow up into a "conceited Prussian."

Rejects in Advance

The Crown Princess of Prussia to Queen Victoria

NEUES PALAIS.

19th May, 1866

My Beloved Mama—Fritz (Crown Prince Frederick William, afterward Emperor Frederick III.) gave your letter to the King, but he has not said anything about it. Fritz does not think the King will accept the proposal, and thinks that the Congress could only propose solutions which either Prussia or Austria would not agree to. I do not despair, but I think the chances of peace become smaller every day! Heaven help us! It is a most miserable, wretched thing.

GARY URGES MILITARY TRAINING

Captain of Industry Says Preparedness Is Peace Insurance

Those who question the wisdom of national preparedness should heed the wise counsel given here by Judge Elbert H. Gary, a national leader who possesses an extraordinary breadth of mind and knowledge of world affairs.

Judge Gary, who commands the world's greatest industrial army, presents through the Hearst newspapers the moral reasons which cause him to advocate preparedness—physically, mentally and financially—against the hazards of the unknown tomorrow.

By ELBERT H. GARY,
Chairman, United States Steel Corporation.

It is fundamental that preparedness is the only certain way of preventing trouble. Of all nations, I think it can be truthfully said the United States is the least disposed to have serious difficulty with any other country.

We desire nothing that we are not legally and morally entitled to; therefore on the highest moral ground we are for peace. Moreover, we believe that from an economic standpoint, and for the natural advancement of our interests, it is to our advantage to procure and maintain the friendship of all other nations.

PEACE INSURANCE.

If we are all the time prepared to successfully resist unjustified attacks from any and every source there is little, if any, danger of our being attacked, or of being persistently urged by some other nation to do or accept something that is immoral, and as a matter of prudence, or safety, and of exerting an influence for the good of humanity, our country must be at peace with all the world, but ready to secure our rights.

DEFEND OURSELVES.

If, then, we are to be prepared to defend ourselves against unprovoked attack we must always be in condition physically, mentally and financially to mobilize and exert our strength to the utmost, up to the full limit of necessity, as occasion may require. We must keep ourselves in a position to utilize all the strength we have, on very short notice.

Our young men should be trained in some regular and intelligent courses of study and practice as are afforded by the Citizens' Military Training Camps, our industrial forces likewise must be in shape to devote their time, skill and means of producing whatever is suitable in their respective lines of business, manufacturing or transporting, or feeding others who might be engaged in defending our country and its interests.

CARRY OLIVE BRANCH

I advocate full, complete and constant preparedness for the defense of our country and our homes. There is no limit, in my judgment, to the obligation on the part of all our people to do everything in their power to be properly prepared against others who are unfriendly belligerent.

Of course I should not impoverish ourselves, nor do anything unnecessary to interfere with the usual natural progress and prosperity of the country. The position to take is not one of hostility, or of seeking or desiring trouble of any kind; nor is it opposed to the principles of Christianity or religion. It means simply the doctrine of live and let live; of helping and protecting ourselves though not to the undue prejudice, or interference with the lawful rights of others.

Our country should always carry the olive branch in one hand, but should be prepared, if unjustly assailed to forcibly defend with the other hand

MILLION FOR MORE PHONES

Larger Part Is to Be Spent for Underground and Aerial Cables

Expenditures of $1,153,320 for new construction was authorized today by the executive committee of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company at its regular monthly appropriation meeting.

Previous appropriations for plant expenditures bring the total for the present year up to $23,219,470. More than half, or $679,601, of the amount appropriated today will be spent in Massachusetts. The amount appropriated to Metropolitan Boston is $441,768.

The following amounts will be spent in other New England States: Maine, $76,094; New Hampshire, $147,866; Vermont, $38,618, and Rhode Island, $211,021.

The largest share of the Metropolitan Boston appropriation, $190,120, will be spent underground and aerial cable, poles and additional equipment in the Mystic central office area.

In the East Boston central office, $33,201 will be expended for a new power plant. Fifty-nine thousand dollars will be spent for underground and block cables connecting with the Haymarket central office.

In Rhode Island, $194,847 will be spent for machine switching dial equipment and private branch exchange equipment.

PRIEST FORCED TO FLEE MEXICAN TOWN

Mexico City, May 3 (A.P.).—Reports indicate chaotic conditions at Zitacuaro, in the State of Michoacan, as the result of conflicts over the government's enforcement of the religious clauses of the constitution. The correspondent of a Mexico City newspaper reports persons being killed without the usual legal formalities.

The inhabitants have sent a telegram to President Calles requesting protection. Luis Cardia, Catholic priest, has been forced to leave Zitacuaro.

LAST OF PILOTS REPORT IN LITCHFIELD AIR RACE

Little Rock, Ark., May 3 (A.P.)—Pilots of all of the balloons that started from here Thursday in the Litchfield cup and national elimination balloon race today have reported and all that remained to be done was to collect the scientific instruments carried and forward them to Washington for formal announcement of the distances covered. The last report filed was that of Lieutenant William A. Gray, pilot of the United States Army balloon B-30.

Coe, professor of education, Columbia University.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL

by Marie Queen of Roumania

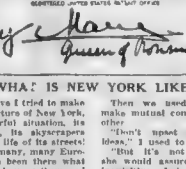
WHAT IS NEW YORK LIKE?

HOW often have I tried to make a mental picture of New York, with its wonderful situation, its splendid harbor, its skyscrapers and the teeming life of its streets!

I have asked many, many Europeans who have been there what impression it made upon them, and each answer was different, according to the character of the speaker.

Stupendous, overbig, overnoisy, overbusy— No time to think, confusing, stimulating, disconcerting, no poetry, no peace, no atmosphere—but yes, stimulating—astonishingly, prickly, vigorously stimulating—overwhelming—and then, always again the expression of STUPENDOUS, for those who find it least conceited that New York is stupendous.

New York, I am sure, would bewilder me, run me off my feet, for all that I am a very active person. The people I am sure I would like, for are they not composed of all peoples? But they would have to take me exactly as I am—outspoken, not always overcareful of the jokes I make (and which are sometimes misunderstood) and not always in sympathy with their methods of publicity. What tales I have heard of American publicity! You put everything into your newspapers in flaming letters and with a thousand variations and headlines. How it confuses and scandalizes our European minds! How did my American newspaper friend put it? "Oh, it's all an excellent dramatization!" That is what she said. And I was astonished.



Then we used to laugh and make mutual concessions to each other.

"Don't upset my tidy royal ideas," I used to plead.

"But it's not badly meant," she would assure me. "We are inquisitive, but not ill-natured. Don't fear reporters. Be frank and tell them what they may print. You'll find them good sports and 'on their honor.'"

I am more than ready to believe. The "good sport" American with a sense of honor and fair play is part of my mental picture. Well—if ever I do come to see you, I hope you won't "turn the words round in my mouth." Bless you all!

Europeans say that in New York especially you have no family life, no repose, that you are always rushing, always overbusy, that even your amusements, your "sports" is hustle to be superlatively efficient always, everywhere. But we Europeans like to blunder about a little sometimes.

My sister, who loved being with you, said to me: "One thing I know you would adore—their flowers. You who are such a flower-lover would go quite crazy over their exquisite, incomparable flowers. In the great cities they are in the florists' shops. In the West and south, they are in the gardens—small paradises of flowers!"

And so I add to my mental picture of harbor, skyscrapers, noise, busy efficiency and inquisitive interest, the flowers—most perfect and beautiful in all the world.

FORBES AID IN HUGE THEFTS

Thompson, Rich Contractor, Sought to End to Keep From Serving Federal Sentence

St. Louis, May 3 (A.P.).—John W. Thompson, wealthy contractor, convicted with Colonel Charles R. Forbes of conspiracy to defraud the government through the Veterans' Bureau, died here today of heart trouble.

Thompson, who was about sixty, had been ill for many months. Recently, after all appeals from his sentence had been denied by the courts, he was examined by physicians of the Veterans' Bureau, who pronounced him in no condition to begin serving his sentence at Leavenworth.

Col. Forbes is now in the penitentiary.

Battled to Keep From Serving His Prison Term

Chicago, May 3 (A.P.).—A petition for probation for John W. Thompson, wealthy St. Louis contractor, who died today, has been pending in Federal District Court here since an appeal to the United States Supreme Court recently failed.

The next step in the process was due next Monday, J. Elliott Byrne, assistant United States district attorney, having instructions from Federal Judge Carpenter to file a brief then.

Colonel Forbes, former head of the Veterans' Bureau, convicted with Thompson, recently began serving his sentence at Leavenworth.

They were fined $10,000 to two years each and fined $10,000 each. They were charged with conspiracy to defraud the government through getting of hospital contracts.

The government recently started action against the surety company which made bond for Forbes to collect the $10,000 fine. The matter is so pending.

MONSIGNOR SPLAINE LAYS CORNERSTONE FOR SCHOOL

With elaborate and solemn ceremonies the cornerstone of the new $500,000 high school, erected by the Redemptorist Fathers of the Mission Church in Allegheny street, Roxbury, was laid before a throng of more than 5,000 persons. Five prelates took part.

Monsignor M. J. Splaine, representing Cardinal O'Connell, laid the cornerstone, assisted by the Rev. William T. Deady, pastor of St. Francis de Sales Church, Roxbury, and the Rev. William J. Casey, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Roxbury.

The Rev. John O'Leary, C. S. R., pastor of the Mission Church, presided, with the Rev. John Scully, C. S. R., as master of ceremonies. The Rev. Augustine F. Hickey, P. J. C., pastor of St. Paul's Church, Cambridge, and diocesan supervisor of schools, delivered the address.

FLAT TOP CRUELTIES PROBE BEING PUSHED

Birmingham, Ala., May 3 (A.P.).—The Jefferson County Grand Jury today entered the second week of its efforts to determine the cause of the death of James W. Knox, West Virginian, at Flat Top, in 1924, and whether accusations touching the workings of the State's penal system call for action by the courts.

Accusations that physical abuse had resulted in death and numerous injuries at Flat Top were before the jury.

WORLD ENGINEERS AND SCIENTISTS IN HUB

A special train from Montreal, bearing 129 of the leading scientists and engineers of 14 nations, arrived in Boston today.

The visitors are members of the International Electrotechnical Company, which was organized for the purpose of standardizing electrical terms and units. Their program calls for visits to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Wellesley College.

STANDS IN BOAT AND FOUR DIE

Montreal, May 3 (CNS).—Eight by a sudden squall while fishing from a boat, two men, a woman and a boy were drowned in the Richelieu River, near Old Chambly, P. Q., it was learned today.

The men are Max Epstein, twenty-five, of this city, and Michael Astroff, twenty-five, of West Mount. The woman is thought to be Margaret Sulch of Montreal. The boy's identity is not known.

Epstein tried to row in a blinding hailstorm and had reached within 60 feet of shore, when the woman stood up and the boat capsized. Epstein, a strong swimmer, tried to save the others, but became exhausted.

JAPS EASE BAN ON SPANIARDS

Tokio, May 3 (A.P.).—Although the government last week refused permission to the Spanish aviators on a flight from Spain to Manila to land under any circumstances on the Island of Formosa while flying from Manila to Manila, it is learned in authoritative quarters that the restriction has now been amended.

It is said the government will permit the aviators to fly over the island, with a proviso that they do not carry cameras and do not make a landing, except in an emergency. The same stipulation holds good on the flight from Manila to [illegible]

RUFFING LIKELY TO TWIRL OPENER AGAINST SENATORS

SOX BACK FOR LONG HOME STAY

Washington Senators Here to Open the Series Today; Coveleskie May Twirl

By NICK FLATLEY.

Our Red Sox are back with us again today, and it is likely that Manager Fohl will either send Ruffing or Lundgren to the mound in an effort to take the first game of the season at the Fenway from the cheaty Washington Senators, who will furnish the opposition.

"Any new ball club," explains Lee Fohl, "is likely to look bad on its first trip. That's natural. The players aren't set or used to each other. A long game stand is the best builder of baseball, and we have eighteen games at the Fenway before we hit the rails again. In that time, we should be going along in much better shape."

Lee has learned not to be a pessimist in the last few years of bitter experience, but he is finding it tough to be optimistic with his Spring hopes all blown to pieces. The Sox really looked as if they intended to be persistent upsets in their first few games.

There is much better material and consequently prospect around the A. L. ball yard than there was a year ago. The team isn't a championship outfit at all, but it can win a lot of ball games. The month of May at home, with the attendant morning practice, should make things into line for more prosperity.

The Sox remain at the Fenway until May 17. They open with the Washington Senators who linger for three games. Then they take on the Cleveland Indians and White Sox for four battles apiece, the Tigers for three and the Browns for a quartet.

At the Western teams will be out for blood, because all can see pennant chances and will be bearing down to collect games from the supposedly weak teams. And the Senators, who open up, will not be in any calm and contented mood. The champions are worried by the fiery drive of the New York Yanks, and realize they have a fight on their hands.

The Washington team ran and will fight. It is a great campaigning squad and has snapped into real form, with the knowledge of a long, tough fight at hand.

'Matty' Memorial Game Here May 28

A tablet in memory of Christy Mathewson, one of the greatest figures who ever graced big league baseball will be unveiled at Braves Field, May 28. The memorial tablet will be placed in the right field wall of the field.

Mrs. Mathewson, Christy Mathewson, jr., Judge K. M. Landis, John A. Heydler, Gov. A. T. Fuller and Mayor Nichols and many other distinguished guests will participate in the exercises.

The Braves are carded to meet the New York Giants on that date. It is expected that a game between old time stars who played on baseball's day will be staged prior to the regular game. The proceeds of the game will be turned over to a fund which is being raised by the American Legion of Barnmao Lake, where Matty died.

WATERBURY SEEKS BOUT FOR FEATHERWEIGHT TITLE

Meriden, Ct., May 3 (AP).—Promoters are making overtures to Upham of Waterbury, it is reported, to secure the Louis (Kid) Kaplan-Pete Nebo featherweight championship match for Conn. at next month. Kaplan has been notified by the New York Athletic Commission that the bout scheduled for June 1 must be held at Queensboro A. C. Stadium.

Mulligan is confident he can sign Garcia to an agreement. Hogan, Md., holder of a junior larger than the featherweight A. A. U. title of red. Mulligan is in New York today to confer with Garcia's manager.

BABE RUTH HITS AT PROPHECY OF CRITICS

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor.

New York, May 3.—It has been slowly and none too painlessly borne in upon the boys that they were only a little less premature than the well known early worm when they popped off during the training season that our Mr. Ruth no longer was essential to the success of the New York Yankees.

There is no reasonable doubt at this moment that the gentleman in question has definitely come back and is as good a ball player as he has ever been.

The Yanks are leading the American League. The margin, and while there is cause to date has been far from a positive proposition, if the writer had to blame it on any individual, Ruth would be that man.

He is hitting no less a figure than .368 at bat but it is not his batting average that is performing miracles in the behavior of the other athletes at that. The club has outrun its pace at a very favorable rate, considering much of its play into color for the first few weeks of the season. Ruth has only one hit to show for a certain ball game. It is almost certain to appear on the night of a night.

What those dubious statistics really signify is that Ruth has begun to be of any great use to the club possibility, even if he is not breaking up a game with a long hit. This more probably has become a very great probability. The word ran has inserted four times where they would do the club good.

As for his lack of speed in getting around the bases, it is not intelligent base running has been a distinct feature of the Yankee attack. In addition the Babe as one of several remarkable runs during recent games that have left me at the plate.

One thing about Ruth cannot be charged. In spite of his fat he never has a direct evidence that he no longer is concentrating on the business of hitting the ball for a ride. Many of Ruth's hits have been singles and doubles and he has tried to make the left field whenever he doesn't get a response.

In other words Ruth has ceased to be an individual and now is a unit of the New York club. As a matter of commercial interest this is no good men are better than Ruth.

HEARST RIFLE TROPHIES ARE AWARDED

By MAJ. FRANK LEE BEALS,
Supervisor of Military Training in Chicago High Schools.

The long waited announcement of the result of the national R O T C rifle matches for the William Randolph Hearst trophies was made today by Colonel George Seitz Weeks acting for Major General William S. Graves, commander of the Sixth Corps Area, United States Army.

Winners of each of the three divisions, which included all educational institutions throughout the United States and its island possessions were given.

Eighty-eight universities, colleges, high schools and military schools competed in the match, and their scores are being counted in the finals.

The University of Minnesota team won first place in the college division with a score of 1,968 out of a possible 2,000 points. The second year cadets of the city has been won by Marquette and of course again next year the cup will be won by the present cadets.

Fort Winfield Scott, California, will win with a score of 1,968 out of a possible 2,000 points. This is the second year Washington team won first place in the same score and is entitled to the permanent possession.

New Problem Arises as Ump Kayos Player

Los Angeles, Cal., May 3 (AP).—Pacific Coast League officials today considered a baseball problem new to this circuit.

In a recent game between Oakland and the San Francisco Missions, Oakland had the bases full with one out, retiring the runner at the plate, Pruett, on second, dashed for third, colliding with Umpire Carroll. Both were knocked unconscious. Pruett was touched with the ball.

A Coast League rule provides that when an umpire interferes with a base runner, causing him to be put out, the runner shall return to the last base touched safely.

As first and second bases were occupied, Umpire Moran at the plate stopped play and permitted a substitute for Pruett to take third. Walter McCredie, Missions manager, protested the game, claiming play should have continued.

GENEWICH ON HILL AGAINST DODGERS

Brooklyn, May 3.—With a young and tenderly nourished winning streak practically ruined by the rampant Brooklyn Robins, the Boston Braves will attempt to begin the construction of another one here this afternoon. "Out of the cellar before the first trip West," is the motto of Dave Bancroft and the only way that can come about is for the Braves to take both of the remaining clashes from Wilbert Robinson's surprising band.

Joe Genewich, the right handed change of pace artist from Elmira will in all probability be on the firing line this afternoon. Genewich has been something of a disappointment so far this season and his present records reads two defeats with no victories. But Benny thinks Genewich is about ready to go. Bob McGraw, the experienced right hander, who pitched for the Red Sox a few years ago and beat the Braves in Boston last week, figures to supply the pitching opposition.

Yesterday's defeat by a score of 9 to 3, was caused largely by ex-Braves who through various channels became members of the Brooklyn club. Joes Barnes held the boys from the Hub to seven scattered hits and turned in a well pitched game. Seven of the nine Brooklyn runs were driven in by Boston graduates Barnes, himself, socked in one run, while Shonny Gus Felix Rabbit Marsanville and Mickey O'Neil drove in two apiece.

STANFORD HITS AT HIGH HOPE OF EAST

By LEWIS BURTON, (Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, May 3.—As a contender for the intercollegiate track and field championships at the end of this month, Southern California appears a formidable, in view of Saturday's dual and triangular meets, as it has at any time during the past six months.

There were few performances that made the East's outlook any more propitious than before the meets, though Easterners may get consolation in the knowledge that there is almost an entire month of preparation left.

The announcement, which came almost simultaneously with the track results, that Stanford University also would send a strong squad on to the title meet, did not change the gloomy aspect of the case. For the East probably the most noteworthy of Saturday's deeds was the running of 4 4 2-5 3 mile by Karl Auer of Dartmouth. But a victory of Auer in the mile would serve only to detract points from Harvard, one of the principal Eastern hopes to stop the Western marauders.

"Red" Haggerty, the Crimson miler, virtually has been conceded first in that event.

By far the most encouraging Eastern race was turned in by Ray Wolfe, the Penn hurdler, when he romped over the low sticks at 220 yards to win in 24 1-5 seconds. He may be the man to stop Kennedy. Grumbles of the U. S. C.

BOGASH IS PICKED TO WIN OVER ELLIOT TONIGHT

TAIT AND MURPHY IN RING TEST

Sammy Fuller and Chick Suggs Sign for Title Bout Here on May 18

BOXING CARD TONIGHT

Lou Bogash, Boston, vs. Jack Elliot, England, ten rounds.

Billy Murphy, Lowell, vs. Clonie Tait, Canada, ten rounds.

Charley Donovan, South Boston, vs. Jimmy Frusetti, Brockton, eight rounds.

Art Weigand, Buffalo, vs. Bing Conley, Lewiston, eight rounds.

Eddie Curtis, Hyde Park, vs. Tommy Lang, England, four rounds.

By JACK CONWAY

THE leather pushers will resume operations at the Boston Arena Club a show tonight. Forty rounds of boxing are on Matchmaker George Freeman's bargain program.

Lou Bogash, Eddie Mack's sturdy middleweight, will furnish the thrills in the feature number when he rolls leaves with Jack Elliot, English mid dleweight, in a ten-round skirmish.

Jack Conway

Bogash is in the midst of a comeback drive that recently all but knocked out Pal Reed at Lynn. He feels that if he can also sock Clonie for a goal that he will be in a position to press his claim for matches with Tiger Flowers and Young Stribling.

The speculative element in the stated Bogash a favorite over the rugged Briton. This writer figures the wise boys are correct in their dope.

The boys are having quite a difficulty trying to decide on the winner of the ten-round skirmish between Billy Murphy of Lowell and Clonie Tait, Canadian lightweight champion.

Murphy, a southpaw, has caused trouble for some of the best of the opposition at his weight. As for Tait, he knocked out Willie Gladwell in his last appearance here, while he has also engaged in hectic quarrels with such illustrious fighting men as Lew Tendler, Joe Dundee, Pal Moran and Rocky Kansas.

THERE is considerable local interest in the eight-session skirmish between Charley Donovan of South Boston and Jimmy Frusetti of Brockton.

Art Weigand, Buffalo middleweight, will also be back in our midst in an eight-chapter affair with Bing Conley of Lewiston. Weigand socked Sailor Thomas around in his Boston debut and looks like a ring slugger. He is expected to upset Conley.

A four round scrap between Eddie Curtis of Hyde Park and Tommy Lang of England will open the show

MATCHMAKER Tom Goodwin of the Suffolk A. A. announced today he has the signed contracts of Sammy Fuller of the North End and Chick Suggs of New Bedford, for a bout to be staged at Mechanics Building on May 18. The midget fighters placed their signatures on the dotted line after David Lumian sky, Suggs' pilot, agreed that the tussle should be at 126 pounds and for the New England featherweight title.

This match has been hanging fire ever since Fuller scrapped with his sensational knockouts over Tony Thomas, Tony Carney and Mickey

OARSMEN GET HARD TESTS THIS WEEK

New York May 3 (A.P.)—While Naval Academy's varsity crew a ready well established as a formidable championship contender through sweeping victories over Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Pennsylvania on successive Saturdays, eastern rowing observers look forward to the opening tests this week for four other major college combinations including the Big Three.

Yale unbeaten in three races for the past three years, under Ed Leader's coaching, opposes Pennsylvania and Columbia next Saturday on the Housatonic River at Derby, Ct. In an event which features the week's intercollegiate sports schedule it may mark the opening race for Columbia, under the tutelage of the former navy mentor, Yonz to a Gridiron. Through the medium of Pennsylvania, it will be possible to draw comparisons between these crews and the Navy which led Penn by five lengths last Saturday.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER E. HORTON

In every golf swing there should be exerted a hitting instinct. I think if I started in with a pupil who had never had a golf club in his hands I would start him off by first developing his hitting instinct. After all, the ball must be hit a good solid blow and while we say rhythm does it and timing does it, and balance does it, still none of these things are a combination of all of them will send the ball far unless the player possesses at all times the true hitting instinct. Often too, we see players who have developed a fine swing but in doing so they have become so concerned with the mechanics of form that hitting instinct has been lost altogether.

CLARK BATTLES McINTYRE

The Casino A. C. of Lynn is prepared to handle the biggest crowd of the year tonight when Buddy Clark of Salem clashes with Johnny McIntyre of St. John in the feature bout of ten rounds.

This will be Clark's first fight since he had his hand operated upon by Dr. Fraily, the celebrated surgeon of New York.

Buddie has given the hand a severe test while training and declares it to be just as good as ever and while odds is great here in Clark's admirers it will not cause any low in the ranks of Clark's prospective opponents as Buddy was without doubt one of the hardest punchers in the country before he injured his right hand.

FENCERS TO COMPETE FOR INTERNATIONAL TITLE

New York, May 3 (I.N.S.)—Fencers of America and Great Britain will meet tonight in the first of a series of three competitions for the Robert M. When Leonard Won Title

WITH his right hand still clinging to the upper rope in his opponent's corner Freddie Welsh, beaten and helpless, tried to get himself up in the ring, sound of his championship fight at the Manhattan Casino on May 26, 1917.

Before the terrific knockout blow, Leonard was not on the floor, and there had not been a count of any sort over him, yet he was in such a helpless condition that to allow the quarrel to go further would have been more than brutal.

For eight rounds the little Briton had done fairly well. He was outpointed but he was never really stung. As the bell clanged for the ninth period Welsh walked up well covered, as he had in previous rounds, and then started to dance about.

Leonard danced sideways with the champion and as he drew near he let a right go to Freddie's mush. That right landed about two inches below the top of Fred's head. It was a terrific wallop, and as it crashed Welsh tripped and it looked as though he was about to fall.

A ROAR went up from the crowded house. Leonard let fly another right but this time it landed fairly on the chin and Fred fell to the floor for the second time during the long, long contest.

As Welsh fell he grabbed the lower rope and pulled himself up immediately. It was sure poor judgment on his part. A novice at the game will take a count to clear his head.

Leonard, thinking he might fall without being hit, stepped back to see. Welsh didn't, however. Instead, he looked in blank fashion around the ring.

Then Leonard put a he had into another right and, catching his man on the ear, sent him down on his face to the resin. Once more Welsh rolled over, and before the referee could count had clambered up the ropes again.

The crowd at this stage of the battle was wild.

Welsh had just reached his feet when Leonard seized it again. He pulled on the chin with [illegible] and the referee [illegible] count of about six or seven seconds.

Welsh grabbed a rope from a standing position and, grabbing the [illegible] Leonard did everything but kick him and [illegible] his bucket.

He was in right after while Welsh held himself there almost in a sitting position. Blood poured from his mouth and nose. It was a terrible sight. The crowd yelled "Stop it!" Referee McFarland then did the right thing and, pushing Leonard away, lifted the beaten Briton to his feet.

Freddie stood up straight. Then, as McFarland turned to speak to Leonard, he fell to the ropes and rebounded clear across the ring. He reeled like a drunken man. His head was about even with his waist as he took a headlong dive through the ropes on the opposite side of the ring. Three of the ringside held him up until his seconds lifted him to his chair.

The crowd went wild. Hats were thrown [illegible] guys who climbs, the ring was full of wild nuts, everybody telling everybody something, and no one could hear.

Leonard was led over to Welsh's corner and shaking his hand, said: "Freddie, it comes to all champions." Welsh looked up in a daze and, thinking probably that he was on his farm, said: "Nellie, bring in the kiddies, here's a friend of mine."

MAKING STENOGRAPHER'S BUDGET

Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

By MARTHA LEE

BUDGET, n.

FINDING that Budget was by-ing such an important part in the financial success of her employer, Jack a stenographer, Frances, asked him to help her budget her $20 a week salary. This was how it was done, figuring on a basis of $as 66 a month.

Savings, $3 a week, board in a private family with laundry, privileges, and business carfares, $:.14 a month; breakfast, supper and noon day dinner, $40 a month; lunches at $:c a day, $10.00 and if you don't think it could be done, at the just let me tell you where you can get a variety of service, cooked food attractively served for the noon, clothing $12 a month personal expenses, $7.50. If a penny personal thrift, this is only a few little items such as candy, books, all recreation, Christmas presents and other gifts, and her vacation expenses.

Frances is not the only one who has profited by Jack's and Margaret's experience. Even the superintendent of the company has asked Jack to draw up an outline showing his method of budgeting and I know you will be interested in it, too.

First, as near as carefully as total income, then figure out the biggest possible sum for rent, food, household equipment, and if you are paying for your home, taxes, etc. Figure that for your self and then to cover the amounts in a budget, putting aside regularly each month the necessary money to meet them as they come due.

Now look back over your previous year's accounts if you have kept them even roughly, and estimate how your money can best be divided. The first estimate will just be guesswork and no doubt you will have to change it later. Then, decide on the amount of savings necessary to cover insurance, large payments and to allow for permanent savings.

Do not let shelter, except in very exceptional cases, cost more than 1-5 of your income. Remember the cost of food on the basis of market prices and the attendance and cooking ability of the housewife. The next inventory is of clothing. Decide on the amount of new clothing necessary in the year to come and figure on that basis. Home sewing and conservative taste will make the same amount of money go much further.

Now estimate in detail the cost of electricity, laundry supplies, repairs, replacements and other unforeseen necessary. These are operating costs. Then the small amount necessary for personal expenses, gifts, advancement, charity and household equipment. Add to these, savings, if necessary, go over them several times, readjusting to make sure you cover the ground. A little care and there will make a great difference at the end of the year.

When you have found a livable budget, resolve to live up to it as far as possible, keeping careful records of expenditures—that will help next year's budget enormously.

Jack is positive that without his budget he and Margaret would be at a loss to know how they were living along in their business of home.

FAMILY BUDGET

Budget will prevent differences arising over finances

MISS [illegible] are well pleased with a picture presented to her on the day of their marriage in January, 1923. January 1st, 1927, their new house will be nearly half paid for and they will have lived well and comfortably for four years. Jack has made steady advancement and they have made provision for a family.

The housekeeping business shows a profit in the savings bank too and best of all, they have the assured feeling that their bills will be met as they are due—unlikely pauned to buy. They feel secure and, in short, there is no worry, only assurance. Their business of home keeping is successful and yours can be equally so if you will let Budget point the way.

Please don't anybody hesitate to write me about your own special budget problem. It is a real privilege to be of service and all letters are absolutely confidential.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

"Jackie" asks for a budget of $12 a week. Out of this, he gives me wife $100 a month for food and personals; $:6 for co-operative; $60 for rent; garage, $10; gas, electric and phone per month, $8; $96 a month traveling expenses; insurance, $40; $50 a month for clothes. Has a big car and lives well.

Mrs. Jackie feels that they should be saving more—promises to live up to her budget if I will make it. This is a big responsibility for more than truly. However, wiser heads than mine have found that of your $12 income, not more than 20 cent should go for shelter and this should include building or business carfares. I am not sure if you mean by travelling expenses a commutation ticket or expenses in connection with his business firm. If a commutation ticket, this, too, must come out of shelter, which is allotted $2:.a week 25 per cent, for food gives $3:.2. which must cover every man, taken in or out of the home.

This is far too high for two people. I never can understand why [illegible] quarter [illegible] spending [illegible] on food and [illegible] must not [illegible] you spend this a week now figure up exercising [illegible] the year and if [illegible] cannot be cut very far off in per cent [illegible] and find food budget [illegible] times out of savings. Do bear this in mind [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] difficulty with the family budget as hubby likes at least four new suits a year and shoes proportionately. If he needs clothes, he gets them bit or miss. He says, "Believe me, a man can talk budget for anyone but himself. I am getting 100 cents out of every dollar and budgeting every thing but his clothes. Why shouldn't he be budgeted as well as everything else."

No reason in the world dear lady. As I said before in this paper, budget will not budget unless the entire family is in on the desire to spend wisely and certain elements must have been decided upon by mutual agreement. "Peace for the house. Savor for the grander," and vice versa is true in budgets. The clothing budget and "personal" will often show that one member of the partnership is getting the lion's share of the spending money.

This family has $200 a month, exclusive of rent and rent. Has already at $12 a week. If you will send me the total family income, your M. B. will be happy to make you a budget. It is not fair to budget a housekeeping allowance because on the amount of the total family income depends the percentage that should be allowed for food and shelter. However, I am guessing that your income is $70 a week. This would allow $14 a week for shelter, including husband's carfare, $17.50 for food, $10.50 for clothing. (Yes, this means clothing [illegible] Operating $10.50, including heat and light and gas, $3, saving $7, personal $10.50 including all other expenses. Your wife's salary is $:0 a week, I guess, and as $10.50 will not cover [illegible] allowance, this is added in this heading, you will have to pare off elsewhere. All insurance to come out of personal, all insurance out of savings.

Mrs. J. H. S. writes that her husband earns $41 a week, out of which she gets $:0 for food, $7 for furniture and gift fund. The rest goes for light, fuel, insurance ($1 a week), milk bill, Xmas Club ($2), telephone ($2.75 a month), and savings ($8 a week).

The standard figures for a $41 budget are savings $8.50 shelter, including carfares, $5, food $10, clothing $7, operating $6 and personal $4.50. Your furniture payments are high and have to come out of the personal fund. Can't you have the amount reduced? Insurance comes out of savings and also the Christmas Club. You are doing well if you are saving $2 a week in addition to this. Telephone comes out of operating, also fuel and light.

Mrs. E. A. E. asks for a budget for $20 a week, five in the family, rent $4, back bill $2 a week, coal and gas $3 a week, carfare $1.20, and the rest goes for food, and anything left for clothes. Small household accounting. I'm sure you could tell you how to make $20 do as that is necessary to give comfortable living conditions for 5 people! Your rent is in the correct proportion except that the $4 should include your husband's business carfares. A standard budget would allow $5 for food, but with 5 in the family you need more than this.

"Nothing" should get $2, "operating," including heat and gas, $3, saving $2, including any insurance you may carry, and payment on back bill, "personal" gets $3, which must cover all other expenses. Maybe you can take a little out of personal and even operating to add to your food budget, but not any how! you can save much until the back bill is paid. Am sending out some economical recipe books which may help a little.

"The Temptress" -:- By Ibanez

The Story Thus Far

The Marquise de Canterac, a penniless aristocrat, has married Rosario Robledo, a wealthy Argentine, for his money. Robledo has fallen in love with Leonora Moreno, a beautiful young widow, who is also loved by Canterac. Moreno has refused to become Robledo's mistress, and Robledo has sworn to have her at any cost. Canterac, who has been losing heavily at cards, has borrowed money from Robledo, who has demanded that Canterac persuade Moreno to become his mistress. Canterac has refused, and Robledo has threatened to ruin him financially. Canterac has gone to Moreno and told her of Robledo's threat. Moreno has refused to be intimidated, and Canterac has left her house in a rage.

It was a little after sunrise when Moreno hastily left his house; Canterac had sent him an urgent message, asking him to call. Frenchman was pacing nervously up and down. He wore his hosts riding breeches; his cartridge belt, revolver and coat were lying on a chair.

Canterac noticed that on all the places of furniture and in all the corners there were numerous packages of every wrapped in tissue paper, tied with delicate ribbon, and sealed.

"This Pirevart fellow, for all his vulgarity, is always getting ahead of me," he said to himself. "He is rich!"

Canterac pointed to the packages. "There are the perfumes we ordered from Buenos Aires. Perfectly useless purchases! The fellow got his before I did."

Moreno made haste to exonerate himself. He had done everything he could to get the order sent down in time. But the order had in some mysterious way come sooner.

Perhaps the Italian had sent a messenger to the capital for it. . . .

Canterac, in spite of his disappointment, didn't want to appear ill-natured. He accepted Moreno's excuses, and slapped him on the back in friendly fashion.

"I have a scheme I want to consult you about. Something must be done to put this intriguing Italian who has the cheek to get in my way back in his proper place. Why, I shouldn't be surprised if that fellow thought himself my superior . . . just because he has money!"

Canterac smiled with a cruel gleam in his eyes and went on:

"But I'll help him to get rid of some of it! Up to the present I've been willing to approve officially of his contract work. But I'm not going to any more and he'll lose by it. He'll have to break his agreement and get out of here . . . ."

The engineer came close to Moreno and began speaking in a low tone as though afraid of being heard.

"I want to do something unique, something that this uneducated immigrant would never be able to think of. It just occurred to me last night. At first I thought it was a crazy idea, but after I'd spent a few hours thinking it over I decided it was something really original and worth doing . . . If it is only possible to carry it out . . . ."

Pirevol offered to manage a house . . . Well, I shall offer me a part . . . a very big one . . . to make here in the middle of this Patagonian desert . . . what do you think of my idea, Moreno?"

"In this park I shall give a fiesta, a garden party in honor of the marquess. I shall even allow myself the pleasure of inviting this rich rustic, just by way of taking vengeance on him by making him squirm with envy. You, my dear fellow, are to act everything. Here are full instructions. I wrote them out last night, when I found there was no use trying to sleep."

Moreno took the papers Canterac was handing over to him, but instead of reading them looked curiously at the engineer, as though ascertaining serious doubts of his sanity.

"I understand your astonishment," Canterac went on. "But it will cost a lot! But what of it? You can spend all you want. I've just received several thousand pesos that I expected to remit to Paris. But I'd rather give the marquess a surprise, and the park will certainly be that . . . . And I can always earn more money. I have every confidence in the future."

Canterac spoke with entire good faith; it was easy enough to hear in his tone the soaring optimism of the lover.

The next day was Sunday, and Watson, about midday, went to Pirevol's former home to see Teera Bianca.

Sebastiana came to the door. "The master is not at home," she said.

Watson was just leaving when Elena appeared, urging Watson with words and gestures to come in. The young man followed his hostess to the living-room.

"At last the pleasure of seeing you in my house," she exclaimed. "You must really consider me a very disagreeable person, you care so little about seeing me."

Richard Watson offered excuses. He had come there twice before with Robelo. It was impossible for him to come every evening like the others.

But Elinea was not interested in these explanations. There was some thing she wanted to say.

SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association

YOUR dependence and that of your family on milk makes it imperative that this element of your diet shall be nearly as possible 100 per cent. pure.

Milk can be contaminated either in the cow or outside.

If a cow is suffering from a disease which forms toxins within its body these will probably be found unaltered in the milk. Or, if the milk is not, the composition of the milk will probably be greatly altered.

Healthy milk has no germs in it, but when the cow is suffering from certain diseases this fact does not hold true, but is full of germs. They may enter through contact of the milk with infected germs in the hands of milkers or from the introduction of dirty straws and teat solutions which are not sterile and through external wounds of the teat.

Diarrhoea in infants and a variety of sore throats in children and adults are caused by milk infected with the germs known as streptococci.

Infected milk may cause much more serious troubles such as scarlet fever, tuberculosis, blood poisoning and Malta fever.

Milk is contaminated in many ways after leaving the cow; the milker is constantly handling utensils, and most probably sweeps manure out of the byre just before he starts. He may be suffering from some disease himself or be a "carrier" of typhoid or diphtheria.

The utensils and pails contain a large number of bacteria which find their way into the milk through being rinsed off the cabin. These can produce alimentary tuberculosis and pneumonia.

Modern methods are well constructed and ventilated, but many are mere hovels of wood and corrugated iron with no drainage and little light or air, and a floor consisting of mud and manure.

It is not difficult or expensive to produce clean milk in spite of the many dangers of pollution it encounters.

SHOPPERS' CHATS

A lady walked down the aisle of one of the large department stores in Boston. She stopped at one or two of the counters to ask the clerks a question, but could not find out what she wanted.

Finally she noticed the floor walker coming toward her, and as he stopped to speak to her all the clerks she went up to him.

"Would you please tell me where in this store I can buy the Griswold meat chopper?" she asked.

"I'm sorry, madam, but we do not sell that make of chopper in this store and I do not know what other store carries it."

Just then the clerk spoke up. "Have you tried the Where-Can-I-Buy Service of the Boston Evening American? They can give you the information that you want. You will find their headquarters at 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass."

"Thank you ever so much," said the young woman. "I will try them as I do not want to spend any more time walking from store to store trying to find information that no one seems able to give me."

Operating as an all-around shopping and business information service, the Where-Can-I-Buy Service answers questions like the following:

Hosiery—"I wish to have you send me the name of a store in Boston that sells Holeproof silk mens hose and also would like to know where I can buy 'Perf' rouge and 'Freshies.' My husband just asked me to find out where I can buy the fortune playing cards, so I will ask your aid on this question, too. Thanking you in advance for this service, I am yours very truly. Mrs. G. Y."

Hat—"Have you any information that you can give me regarding a good place to have a hat made? I have been all over Boston and have not been able to find a hat that fits me, and is becoming all in one. If you will direct me to a shop that does this work I would be most grateful, Awaiting your reply. Mrs. T. P."

Mattress—"I find that two of my mattresses need to be recovered, and as I do not know where to go to have this work done I am asking you to inform me of a good concern that can do it for me. Inclosed please find a two-cent stamp for your reply. Mrs. H. D."

Flowers—"I am starting a small store down on the Cape and find that I will have a very good market for flowers during the week-ends. Will you please send me the name and address of a concern in Boston that will be able to supply me with flowers at wholesale for my shop? Thanking you in advance I am, yours very truly, K. J."

Bottles—"Will you kindly advise where I can buy the small one-ounce bottles? I want the machine-made kind and wish to get them in gross lots. I am ever so much obliged to you for this assistance. M. G."

Gold Fish Tank—"Where can I buy a large, oblong glass tank for gold fish? I want one large enough to put plants and a small castle in the bottom. B. T."

Cards—"I am planning to open a shop and would like to have you send me the name and address of a place where I can buy at wholesale the greeting card of a good concern that can do it for me. Inclosed please find a two-cent stamp for your reply. Mrs. H. D."

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

Queen Victoria Pleads Against Fratricidal Warfare

Our christening (of Princess Victoria, born April 12) will be such a sad one; the day after, my Fritz leaves and joins his troops, taking the command of the Silesian Army; when and where I shall say him again I do not know; what I feel I cannot tell you. I think my heart will break. All is uncertain, and ruin and misfortune of every kind likely.

We hear nothing talked of all day but war and preparations for it. The command which Fritz has received is very fine and very honorable, but a most difficult one; he will have almost exclusively Poles under him, which you know are not so pleasant as Germans. Your devoted Mother,

VICTORIA.

Brave Saxon King

The King of Saxony to Queen Victoria.

SCHONBRUNN, 6th July, 1866.

Most Gracious Cousin—I am writing to your Majesty a few days after the eventful battle of Koniggratz. My army, with my two only sons at its head, has fought bravely, and to as little disadvantage as I am myself, notwithstanding its severe losses. My consolation is to know that the sacrifices we have made were made for our country and that I can say with the deepest conscience that I could not, I ought not, to have acted otherwise than I did.

In the negotiations for peace the voice of your Majesty will have great weight. I know your Royal heart. I leave my cause and that of my sorely tried country in your hands, with the fullest confidence that your Government will support the cause of right and justice with its accustomed energy.

JOHN

Great United Germany

Prince Ernest Leaningen to Queen Victoria.

COWES, 7th July, 1866.

Dearest Aunt—I have always felt confident the Prussians would win, and I also have felt convinced years ago that the present events would come to pass either by way of revolution or by means of a war.

If a great united Germany is to be the result of the present fighting, the Fatherland's best blood will not have been shed in vain. It always has struck me that a great and powerful German Empire or even a strong Prussia (names matter but little) would be the natural and safest ally of Great Britain. She would never prove a dangerous rival like France, and might be most useful in days of trouble.

Pray forgive my taking the liberty of saying all this, but it is my firm belief that Prussia alone can work out the future of Germany.

STOP BURNING ECZEMA

Penetrating, Antiseptic Zemo Will Help You

Never mind how often you have tried and failed, you can stop burning, itching Eczema quickly by applying Zemo. In a short time usually every trace of Eczema, Tetter, Pimples, Rash, Blackheads and similar skin diseases will be removed.

For clearing the skin and making it vigorously healthy, always use Zemo, the penetrating, antiseptic liquid. It is the one dependable treatment for skin troubles of all kinds. Ask your druggist for a small trial size or large bottle if less is needed.

Heal that itching rash with

Resinol

One who has used the comforting healing ointment writes—"Resinol Ointment is so soothing it stopped my itching at once and I got the first night's sleep I had had in weeks. Now my skin is well." What it has done for me it can do for others. Why don't you try it and save yourself hours of needless suffering? Resinol soothes as it heals.

Ask your druggist about it.

Prussian Conquerors

Prince Ernest Leaningen to Queen Victoria.

DARMSTADT, 21st July, 1866.

Dearest Mama—The Prussians marched in this morning. Their bands playing and making as great a demonstration as they could. My people, I am told, are very quiet at the moment, and my father-in-law walked up and down the room in a state of rage and indignation, in feeling that his home and his country were no more his own, as the Prussians pay for nothing and demand everything, the place will soon be ruined, the inhabitants here had done so much for their own troops and wounded already.

I do not know where dear Louis is now. Please God he is safe, but the anxiety is fearful. I am well, baby too; the wish to get well keeps me up, as I wish to get about again.

We must get the gracious permission of the Prussians for anything we want, we smuggle people with our things with difficulty out of town, if we wish anything, but the Prussians watch so well, to prevent our communicating with our troops or with anywhere outside, that we are the most complete prisoners. This goes so far, we have difficulty in getting a decent meat, or the common luxuries of life, for the Prussians devour everything, and we can get nothing even from Frankfort.

Napoleon's Demand

We hope and pray daily that this dreadful state of affairs may change, for it is past all bearing, and we are ready to give up everything for the sake of peace, after having suffered so much; and the longer it lasts, the worse it gets.

My mother-in-law is exemplary as always, looks out for the wounded and never thinks of herself. From our Army we hear the greatest praise of dear Louis, of whom all are so fond and proud.

Ever your affectionate daughter, ALICE.

Queen Victoria to the Earl of Derby (Prime Minister).

OSBORN, 8th Aug., 1866.—The Queen has been much alarmed by the telegram from Lord Cowley (British Ambassador to France) which she received this morning, in which he says that "France has asked Prussia for the frontier of Rhine and even more."!

England cannot remain a passive spectator of such proceedings, and the Queen relies on Lord Derby and his Cabinet giving this immediate and serious consideration.

The Earl of Derby to Queen Victoria.

10th Aug., 1866.—In answer to the French demand, Prussia has returned a peremptory refusal to recognise any claim on the part of France to territorial compensation.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

DEAR MRS. BEEKMAN:

When attending a ball, where an evening dress is worn, kindly advise whether a hat is worn, or just an evening wrap and white gloves. It will be taken there in a closed automobile.

(2) Please advise what is ordered at a hotel, when stopping in after the theatre in the evening or after a dance. If one orders only a cup of tea or a salad, is it customary to order coffee" I would like to be informed about this thing.

PEARL.

YOU should not wear a hat with evening dress.

(2) If you will send me an addressed envelope, I shall be glad to send you a pamphlet of "After-Theatre Eats" which I have compiled. It contains everything that I could think of to order.

It is correct to order coffee with sandwiches and salad, if you wish, and if you are one of those fortunate human beings on whom coffee does not have a wakeful effect.

DEAR MRS. BEEKMAN:

Is it proper to congratulate one's intended daughter-in-law? What should one say the first time one meets her after she has received the engagement ring? Is this the same for sisters and brothers?

R. M. B.

WITHIN a day after the son has told his parents that he is engaged, his parents should call on his fiancee. This is one of the few remaining rules of etiquette left, of course, if they live within "calling distance." This should of course be done so that the young lady will feel that she is welcomed into the family, and that her future-to-be are kind and thoughtful and well bred people. For them to allow any appreciable time to elapse before going to see her to welcome her into the family, is inexcusable, unless there is really a reason for the delay. And, if there is, they should explain the reason and send a message to her. If the father cannot go, the mother should go and also offer his "respects."

And the sisters and brothers of the groom-to-be should also go as soon as possible to call on the new "sister" and her parents.

A PIRATE of HEARTS

By BEATRICE BURTON

The Thrilling Love Story of a Boston Girl and the Husband Who Strayed

CHAPTER LVIII.

Copyright, 1926, Johnson Features Inc.

As Sylvia unlocked the door of the Little White House the telephone was ringing loudly.

She picked it up.

"Yes?" she asked, and Aunt Agony answered her.

"Well, where in the world have you been all this time? I've been calling you for two hours," she snapped.

Sylvia laid the telephone on the table, saying "wait a minute," and walked over to the stairs with wide, startled eyes.

On the third step from the bottom lay a man's glove—Ranny's glove. It was one of a pair that Sylvia had given him at Christmas time.

She picked it up. It was damp and rain spotted. Ranny had been here while she was gone. Or else, he was still here, perhaps.

Forgetting all about Aunt Agony at the other end of the wire, she dashed up the stairs and into the bedroom that Ranny and she had shared. It was in wild confusion. The dresser drawers stood open. The door of the clothes closet stood open. A couple of pasteboard hat boxes lay on the floor. Some worn silk shirts had been flung over the foot of the bed. An old leather cigarette case and three ancient cigarets lay on the seat of Ranny's leather arm chair.

Sylvia was panting as if she had been running hard, as she groaned she turned from the littered room to Ranny's clothes closet, and peered into its shadowy depths.

Ranny Is Off

His kitbag and his old pinskin suit case were gone. Then she remembered the taxicab she had just passed on her way home. He had been in it.

He was gone. He had left her. He had left her, and that little baby.

She stood once more in the centre of the room, staring blankly at the confusion all around her. She could scarcely believe that he had gone away like this.

It must be a dream, a nightmare. But she knew that it wasn't a dream. It was as real as the rain splashing against the streaked window panes. She must make up her mind to the fact that Ranny had left her.

Then she saw that he had left a letter for her. An envelope, with her name scrawled across it in pencil, was tucked under the little blue lamp on the bedside table.

She picked it up and read the few lines that Ranny had scrawled across it:

"I suppose the only way to make you see that I am not going to live with you again is to go away. I have told my father how things are, and he will see that you are taken care of until you get your divorce. The money question can be settled then, of course.

That was all. Just the bare, brutal fact. He hadn't even signed his name to the note.

He had left his house and all that it stood for, as carelessly as he would have walked out of a hotel.

But where had he gone?

And what had he told his father?

"I suppose I ought to go down to see Father Phelps, and find out," Sylvia thought. "I suppose I ought to know where I stand."

She knew that she ought to go down and send Mother Phelps' car away from the house, too. And Aunt Agony was still waiting for her to return to the telephone, probably.

But somehow Sylvia couldn't stir from the room. She wanted to stay here where she was hidden from everyone—and from everyone's pity and curiosity.

She felt that she could never go out and face the world again.

It wasn't only that she was hurt to her very soul. She was ashamed, too.

She was ashamed as only a woman who isn't wanted can be ashamed. A woman who has given her whole capital of beauty and love and devotion to a man—and he has trampled them under foot.

Presently the doorbell rang again, and again, and again.

"Probably the tailor calling for Ranny's suit," Sylvia thought, but she did not move. The doorbell rang twice more and then was silent.

After a couple of minutes some little stones pattered smartly against the windows of the room where she sat. Then another shower of them came.

She got up then and looked out.

Aunt Agony, with her hat on one side, and anger burning in her sallow cheeks, stood out on the rain-soaked driveway.

It was she who had been throwing the gravel at the windows. She had a handful of it in her gloved hand now.

Her lips moved rapidly as she looked up and saw Sylvia standing at the window. She motioned for her to come downstairs and open the front door.

"My stars! I thought you were dead when you didn't come back to the telephone," she cried, as she stepped into the house. The first thing she did was to put the receiver back on the hook with a bang.

"What happened to you, anyway?" she asked, angrily. "I stood there, clicking that telephone for about ten minutes, and then came out."

If she had bothered to look at Sylvia she would have seen that she was paying no attention to her. The deep-blue eyes looked through her and beyond her.

"Ranny's left me," Sylvia said quietly, and held out the crumpled little note.

"What!" Aunt Agony's voice was half a whisper and half a shriek. "What?"

She took a piece of paper into the living room and smoothed out the crushed note on the top of Sylvia's little tea table. Then, holding it close to her eyes, she read it.

"Just the sort of trick I knew he'd play!" she remarked disgustedly, when she laid it down. "If he were half a man he'd have come and told you he was going, instead of sneaking off like this."

She was looking at Sylvia with great bitterness in her eyes.

Aunt Agony's Advice

"Well," she said, after a pause, "you've brought your plan to the market, haven't you? You've given him a call-you've four of the best years of your life, and now he's thrown you down, just as I always knew he would—left you with the child to support! I suppose I can take care of it now the rest of my life, while you go out and earn the living!"

Sylvia was too crushed to answer her. The practical side of the thing was beyond her just now. All her mind could take in was the one dreadful fact that Ranny had left her.

He was never going to live here with her and her baby again in the Little White House.

Aunt Agony got in her carrying into the drive would never again send a thrill of joy tingling along her nerves. He would never read his morning paper in the dining room across the hall from where she stretched on the davenport with his smoking table beside him and a book in his hand.

"Oh, what am I going to do?" Sylvia groaned aloud.

"Do?" echoed Aunt Agony in her vinegary voice, "why you're going to refuse to divorce him. Let him leave you, if he wants to! Let him run off to his new charmer, but you don't have to divorce him. Why should you give up your dignity as a married woman just because that Delano piece wants to be Mrs. Randall Phelps? A woman's a fool ever to divorce a man. If she can't live with him, let her live away from him, but I don't believe in divorce, and never did!"

But at that moment Sylvia knew that Aunt Agony had decided things for her. She knew that she would divorce Ranny if he wanted her to—she loved him too much to refuse to give him his freedom if he really wanted it! She had given it to him when he broke their engagement, and she would give it to him now, when he wanted to end their marriage.

However, she said nothing about her decision to Aunt Agony.

She knew that Aunt Agony would argue about it all the rest of the day if she did, so she wiped her eyes in silence.

"I left Sarah Wilk with the baby," Aunt Agony remembered suddenly. "We'd better go."

"There'd be no point in divorcing Ranny, anyway," she muttered thoughtfully, as they started home. "You'd never get any alimony out of him anyway—There's no juice in a cork," you know."

Sylvia, busy with her own unhappy thoughts, said nothing, and they walked to the street car.

At the corner a car slid to a stop beside them, and Peter Wilk's voice hailed them briskly.

"I'm going your way. You'd better hop in, both of you!" he called.

Peter's car was a roadster. Aunt Agony pushed Sylvia in first and clambered in after her. Sylvia found herself very close to Peter, so close that every time the car gave a jolt her shoulder touched his.

She drew away from him.

She disliked to be near any man except Ranny, and always had.

"Queer!" she thought. "That I love him so, and he doesn't love me at all. I don't believe he ever has loved me."

In that instant she gave Ranny up. The long struggle was over.

"I'll go down to see him at his father's office in the morning, first thing," she thought, "and tell him that I'll do whatever he wants me to about the divorce business."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Girls Who Don't Pet

-:-

By Beatrice Fairfax

A LETTER appeared in this column, signed "The Three Dodos." It was a letter from three young men, asking how they could meet sensible, wholesome girls. The writers expressed preference for girls who can enjoy the companionship of young men without promiscuous petting.

Since that day letters from girls have been pouring in on the subject of the Three Dodos.

"I can only quote from a few of the letters today.

"Dear Miss Fairfax," says Sylvia, "I'm writing you about The Three Dodos because my two girl friends and I would love to meet those young men.

"We would love to meet young men who do not want to kiss and pet," declare Mary and Charlotte. "We are two girls who have come in contact with all types of young men. But we have never met any like the Dodos. Because we refuse to pet, young men see us only once or twice, then forget all about us. Rather than kiss and pet all the young men we know, we go about by ourselves and have a good time as we can. Please tell those Three Dodos that they haven't looked hard enough or they could easily find the kind of girls they want to meet."

Regina writes, "I could not resist answering the Three Dodos. I am twenty-six and am still searching in vain for a man who can take a young woman out and not insult her the first time he is with her; who can shake hands at the door when bidding her good-night instead of asking for the good-night kiss.

"Where are the Three Dodos?"

Ruth writes, "I am just past my teens." Ruth writes. "I'm called old-fashioned because I don't allow myself to be petted and kissed by all who come along. A decent young man is hard to find in my neighborhood."

I haven't space for more letters. But the few I've quoted go to prove that a quiet, sensible young man who can be a pleasant companion without petting, who doesn't demand kisses in return for movies, theatre trips and other attentions at the commercial rate of so much for so much—in short, a gentleman—will find that his friendship and companionship are welcomed by countless modern girls.

"What?" I asked.

"That a snob and a climber is always one or less of a darn fool. That a man who thinks to get on in the world by following like a poodle at the heels of a celebrity is a dunce.

The Making of a Husband, Ann Lisle's Clever Serial

"I TOLD you what he cabled me," Jim said. "I showed you the message in which he asked me to keep you from being affected by his letter—which he said was written by a sick man who didn't know what he was saying. He ended his message 'Good luck to you both.' Don't you realize that—as a man I know enough about men to read between the lines of that message?"

"And what do you read—what can you read 'between the lines' of anything as plain as that?" I demanded.

"That Lacy cares deeply," Jim said and stopped there.

Then a queer thing jumped out and got itself said with the completeness that comes so many conversations and "conferences."

"Don't you value me the more because you think Radin cares for me?" I asked. And then, before Jim could more than open his lips to deny, I plunged ahead frantically: "Pat said that you were the sort of man to value your wife the more because she was attractive to another man. He indicated that I was in no sort of way to play the gaud and flaunt an admirer!"

A groan from Jim interrupted me as he buried his face in his hands and dragged out between dry lips, "Is that how I look to Pat" And could you believe him?"

"I thought of your flirtations," I said. "I realized how reckless you are—how easily bored—how you have always seemed to need some outside interest to keep you stimulated—to make the marriage bond endurable. I remembered how you had humiliated me by taunting my admiration for Ruth Greene for all the world to see—"

"I hope you also recalled how I turned from her—and forever—when I discovered her real calibre and the sort of intrigue of which she was capable to get what she wanted—"

"She wanted you," I broke in.

"Why shouldn't she have intrigued? Why should she have spared me? You did!"

"Anne!" protested Jim, but I went on bitterly torn by the lacerating memories of humiliations I had thought buried and forgotten.

"You refused to give Ruth up. You let her trail you around while I sat at home and ate my heart out. And some times I felt as apineless as—suppose the word thought me—"

"Just as go all over that now that it seems only the vaguest of memories?" asked Jim. "I can scarcely believe the things you are telling me of myself, Anne. But I know I did call somewhat the chap who made such a fool of himself who had such a poor sense of values that I doesn't seem to be he—or even anyone I know. Word of honor, be-down I can't see how I could be such a blankety blank dashed fool."

"You were, though," I said crisply. I had to bite the words off, because Jim's attitude was so much like that of a little boy being reminded how he used to rob the jam pot that I had all I could do to keep my face straight. To laugh in the midst of this serious talk would have been to forfeit all my natural advantages. I have longed for ages to have this thing out with him. But, manlike, he has objected to discussing things and has managed to avoid the thing he didn't want to be bothered with.

"You tortured me," I added, burying myself again in unhappy remembrance and refusing to let the whole thing drop into the limbo of time-forgotten and unexplained. "You left me to face life with the knowledge that your love wasn't proof against a fool of a woman who treated you shamefully. I've gone around afraid—wondering when you would—do it again!"

"So that's what I did to you," said Jim in a low, pained voice. "I left you dreading—the next time—thinking there must inevitably be a 'next time.' Don't you realize that when Ruth mixed herself up with that Australian scoundrel who tried to steal Betty's pearls—and who stomped just this side of murder—I saw what a vain popinjay of a woman she is—outside of her gen ius? Don't you see what I learned then?"

Your Smile

will show dazzling clear teeth in a few days if you do this

This simple, NEW method removes the stubborn film that hides the natural beauty of your teeth and imperils healthy gums

TEN years ago dull and dingy teeth were seen on very side. Today they are becoming a rarity. Note the gleaming smiles you see now wherever your eyes turn.

Please don't believe your teeth are "different"; that they are naturally off color and dull. You can correct that condition in even a few days.

Modern science has discovered new methods in tooth and gum protection. Leading dentists advise them. In fairness to yourself, make the test offered here.

Do This—Remove that dingy film; it invites ugly teeth and fosters gum disorders

Run your tongue across your teeth, and you will feel a film.

That film is an enemy to your teeth and gums. You must remove it.

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It absorbs discolorations and gives your teeth that cloudy look. Germs by the millions breed in it, and they, with tartar, are a chief cause of pyorrhea.

Tooth and gum troubles and decay now are traced largely to this film. Old-time methods could not successfully combat it. That's why tooth and gum troubles increased.

Note the difference in teeth and gums

In Pepsodent dental science has discovered two effective film combatants. They curdle the film and remove it, then firm the gums.

Now what you see when that film is removed—the velvety gum and whiteness of your teeth—will amaze you.

Old methods of cleansing fail as these results.

Then the world has turned, largely on dental advice, to this new method.

It will give you the lustrous teeth you wonder how other people get. It will give you better protection against tooth and gum trouble.

A few days' use will prove its power beyond all doubt.

Mail the coupon. A 10-day tube will be sent you free. Use it three times daily—morning, evening, at bedtime—then note the remarkable difference in your teeth and gums.

FREE Mail This for 10-Day Tube to THE PEPSODENT COMPANY Dept. B-1003, 1104 S. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

Lucy Lowell on New Freedom

By Lucy Lowell

THE new order of womankind—the recently developed Waterhood of Big Achievement—both in America and in England is not greatly impressed by titles.

They seem rather an empty honor. If you do something important enough, your name will be known. No frill of "Sir" or "Lady" is necessary to make it outstanding.

And yet if the British government confers decorations upon men for valuable public service. Why shouldn't the same honors fall to women in recognition of similar service?

The Women's Freedom League in London believes they should. Furthermore, the members of the organization are opening a campaign to see that they do.

It is the newest one of the most interesting attempts at establishing a sex equality of all the many and sometimes bitterly fought battles English women have waged to that end.

In their protest they point out that two viscountesses, two baronnes, five privy councillors and fifty-five knight bachelorships were conferred upon men in the last British honors list.

But not one women, they declare, received an honor of any importance.

"Why," asks the League, in effect, "were not the services of women who have done a great work in England during the past three years recognized in the same way as those which certainly proved no more beneficial to the community?"

Some of these women are Margaret Bondfield and Mrs. Wintringham, ex-members of Parliament; Annie E. F. Horniman, Lillian Bayliss and Sybil Thorndike, representing the stage, Cicely Hamilton, writer and speaker; Maud Royden, preacher; Commandant Mary S. Allen, organizer of women police; Lillian Barker, governor of the Girls' Borstal Institute at Aylesbury; Gwynedd Stephenson, artist; Gertrude Bell, explorer; Mrs. Alderton and Mrs. Marsden, mayors of Colchester and Birkenhead.

It does seem unfair, doesn't it? In this day of so-called universal equality there isn't, of course, any reason why the women mentioned, every one of them more or less famous because of signal achievement, should not receive the same acknowledgment that men receive.

Excepting, perhaps, that titles—creatures of a system of aristocracy falling into decay—would mean so little actually.

Still, there's a principle to be considered. And because of that, American women are wishing success to the campaign inaugurated by the Women's Freedom League.

Fashions and Fancies

WEARING Best Bib and Tucker for week-days as well as Sunday may seem quite rash, but that is just what the girls are doing with the versatile new bibbies pieces of neckwear that are long and broad enough to be tucked in as vests, are cut with long tie ends that enable them to be worn as a fashionable collar with any frock, or can be used as scarfs.

Upon the Border of the newest French sport silks depends their smartness. Solid tone silks have the most delightfully gay border designs that are all the trimming required for the entire frocks that are usually made in variations of the jumper style.

Rising Slender Hopes upon the cut of her Spring charmeen coat, the tone too-slim woman plans a disguising effect through wearing a coat with long, V-shaped gores in the back, and rows of heavy silk stitching that takes a diagonal slant from shoulders to hem. The elongated tuxedo, fur collar, reaching far below the normal waistline, also heightens the thinning effect.

Doing Nothing by Halves the navy or black cordeen coat with a polka dotted silk lining, completes its effect by having a long separate scarf and a matching handkerchief, also of the dotted silk. The kerchief is worn trailing from one of the deep jumper pockets.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

THIS is the season of the year when housewives are devoting their time to literature, and fly paper is the most popular periodical.

THERE are so many foreign bugs in the country that fly paper is now being printed in several tongues.

GNATS can get stuck in any language.

THIS sticky parchment is being made larger this year so that the flies will have a chance to sit down.

HERETOFORE if they got caught in May they had to stand up all summer.

BUT the flies are getting smart. Lots of them are wearing rubbers.

SOME people don't believe in glue, they use ice. When the fly lights on it he slips and breaks his neck.

ONE woman threw banana peels all over her parlor, but the only insect she caught was her husband.

ANOTHER lady used to pour molasses on her hubby's bald head to attract the flies. And as soon as they alighted on his skull she killed them with a hammer.

HIS scalp was so tough that she wore out three hammers.

A WOMAN had so many flies in the house that she used to catch them and paint them red so that the neighbors would think they were lightning bugs.

GNATS are terrible pests. Some of them are so anxious to get into the parlor that they come up and ring your doorbell.

ONE family had a fly who used to go out in the kitchen and open the ice box.

HE was so tame that he played with the children.

DAILY SHORT STORY

JEFF BARDSLEY looked impatiently at this watch; peevishly at the busy entrance to the Belfort lobby.

Strangers, always strangers. The few he used to know in this big hotel seemed to have vanished, the one he waited eagerly for did not appear. And Jeff, because he prided in her fault, was bitterly chagrined.

All the way across the Atlantic and three days in New York he had waited for this night, when Jean Bulmer should come to him and redeem her promise of a kiss.

It started with a flirtation on the promenade deck of the Orona. Jeff was off to America for the first holiday in years, a holiday taken chiefly that he might do the supporting of the groom at the nuptials of an old and honest friend, John Hoover. Jean furnished all the sunshine on that trip. It was dark and stormy all the way. On deck when the sky occasionally lightened, in the lounge when it was a sleepy place or nearly empty Jeff made love to her with all the ardor and pleading warmth of a Don Juan just returned from three years in prison. She listened to him kindly, happily; but with the calm and reserve of a shy, pretty maiden who has been severely cautioned against the advances of strangers on her first long and dangerous voyage. Many times, however, she had almost yielded him her lips; but just as Jeff would seek to put his arm about her and snatch the kiss he craved from her tiny, carmined mouth, something would cause her to draw back. Push him away from her and give denial.

"No, Jeff. I cannot do it. You are good and lovable. I know you love me with a love that would be faithful. When we got to New York I shall kiss you. I promise you that. How fortunate I am to have your love, your fidelity."

Often she spoke of fidelity. Jeff wondered if it was fidelity that kept her from him. But no, she was Miss Bulmer. She was free to listen to him, she must be free to love. But for some reason she refurbished him. It was not, he flattered himself, because she did not care. Jeff was a handsome chap. He had set himself forth to captivate her, like a youth who has just discovered the wonder of having one to love. From Southampton to New York seemed like a ferry trip to Hoboken. Jeff wanted the voyage to keep right on around the world several times, long enough for his fidelity to conquer her scruples.

But she left him at the dock. There was no one to meet either of them. Her coming was to be, like his, a surprise for her friends. No, she would not tell him where she was going. She promised instead to see him Thursday night. When he suggested the Belfort, she said, "I won't fail you, Jeff. I, too, am faithful to my promises. You have not forgotten what I promised you?"

Jeff sought to get it then. No success.

Now it was Thursday night in the Belfort lobby. Jeff was there; she was not.

"Fidelity!" said Bardsley to himself. "She is faithful to her promise . . . those she must have sounded it to someone else. She was to be here at seven. It is eight now. She promised to let me kiss her and I believed. Well, what's to do? Oerl! I had forgotten old John Hoover's wedding. I didn't even look him up; and I've been here three days already. Let's see. Where's his hangout?"

He pulled a much-worn letter from his pocket and read it with a refleshing smile. John also spoke of faithfulness. "Gertrude Trent is the faithful type," he wrote; and Jeff grinned. "She is like you in that regard," and Jeff grinned wider. "True to one, to one alone, until death." Jeff laughed out loud, drawing suspicious and envious glances towards him.

"Sure," he commented. "We're all like that. Jean Bulmer was. And I hardly think she is dead, while I haven't seen my name in the obituary. What price fidelity? I must call John."

"Mr. Jeff Bardsley! Mr. Jeff Bardsley!" a monkey-faced page was shouting in a deaf old gentleman's ear. "Telephone call, sir," he told Jeff for a dollar.

It was John Hoover.

"A decent chap you are, Jeff. I just heard you were at the Belfort. Someone told Gert. You were about to call me? You are forgiven. Come up right away. She is here. And we are to be married Saturday. She is anxious to meet you, Jeff. The dearest, faithfullest little thing. Just like yourself, Jeff. How is . . ."

Some merciful medium cut him off. Jeff praised the Lord, went back to the lobby to have a last look for the defaulting Jean Bulmer, smoked a little and set out for Hoover's.

John was the sort of chap who cannot act. If he was angry, happy, mournful, joyous; you knew it. He was like a boy now, greeting a much-missed playmate. He dragged Jeff in as if he feared there was danger of some evil force splitting the visitor away.

"There are a few friends with us, Jeff. You know the Wordens? And Jack Bartley? And Gert—she's the . . ."

"Aye! It's good to see you again, John, old man. And your bride-to-be must have all the marks of a winner. She is a lucky girl. I hope she knows it."

They walked towards the drawing-room, wordless as good friends are after years of separation. A few yards from the door Jeff Bardsley stopped as decisively as Lot's wife when she turned her head.

"Who . . . who is that talking, John? That girl?"

John looked at him proudly, and hurried him along.

"That's Gert, of course. She has a wonderful voice. She is an opera singer, you know."

Jeff Bardsley, at sea, foolish, discomfited, was being presented to Gertrude Trent. Which would have been ordinary enough were it not that Miss Trent was the same warm eyed lovely little thing whom, as Jean Bulmer, Jeff had made love to and adored.

"It is good to meet you, Mr. Bardsley . . . Jeff." I may call you Jeff? It is especially good to meet you this evening. John said I might kiss you. He promised me that. And he is one of those who keep their promises. I try to be—also. And I promised myself I'd Miss Will you mind."

Out of the clouds, she spoke softly to Jeff. And out of the clouds she bent and kissed him. Really she stood on tiptoe; but Jeff was mortal y drooped to Lilliput stature.

John looked at the tableau enraptured.

"Have you never seen Gert on the stage, Jeff? She has been singing opera in England. Her stage name is Jean Bulmer. She just finished up, and came over without telling us of it. She took us all by surprise," explained John. "She came over on the Orona. What boat did you take, Jeff?"

"The . . . the Marina." Had Jeff, wondering if that was a ship or a moll-use. He was demoralized. Why did not someone do something? Miss Trent acted.

"May I sing for you all?" she asked. "And how is Mrs. Bardsley, Jeff?" It was an arch question, said casually as she seated herself at the shining grand. But it hit Jeff between the eyes, making him dizzier. "John used to write me about you and her . . . how fond you were and how . . . faithful. I hope I shall always be as faithful to John."

"I . . . I'm sure you will be," gulped Jeff as best he could.

FOXY GRANDPA'S INTERESTING BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

BOBBY and I passed a great penitentiary, and as we looked in through the gateway, Bobby said:

"Doesn't everything look neat and tidy, Foxy Grandpa?"

"Yes," I replied, "and everything in the modern prison is spick and span, and sanitary. Very different from John Howard's time."

"Who was John Howard, Foxy Grandpa?" asked Bobby, looking up into my face.

"John Howard," I replied, "was a very peculiar, but wonderfully kind man who lived in England about the time of the American Revolution."

"What did he do, Foxy Grandpa?"

"I'll tell you," I said, as Bobby and I walked along the street hand in hand.

"John Howard was a queer young man, very delicate, but highly studious. Once when he was living in a boarding house, he became very ill.

"His landlady was most kind to him, and nursed him back to health. His gratitude to her was very great, and thinking the finest way in which he could show his appreciation of her care, he insisted upon marrying her, although he was but twenty and she was fifty.

"John Howard spent his time studying astronomy and medicine, and the world might never have benefited as the result of his work if something hadn't happened.

"Very unexpectedly, John Howard was elected Sheriff of Bedford in England, and in his position as sheriffs he had much to do with the prisons of that county.

"Now formerly the sheriffs had not paid much attention to the prisons, but Howard was very thorough and conscientious in everything which he did. So when he became sheriff, he made a careful inspection of all the jails and prisons.

"He was horrified at the state in which he found them. The cells were damp and reeking with foul odors, and the jailers were allowed to treat the prisoners as they pleased. Rich prisoners were allowed to buy luxuries and bribe the jailers for comforts, while poor prisoners were starved and beaten.

"Howard did all he could to comfort and better the conditions of the prisoners in his own country, and then he visited other countries and found the cells to be similar there. He went before kings and emperors and told them of these horrible conditions.

"It was then that prison reform was started throughout the world, and those who were paying the penalty for crime were made as comfortable as could be under the unhappy conditions which they were sentenced to live."

"He certainly must have been a good man, Foxy Grandpa," said Bobby.

"He was," I replied. "He died far from his native land in Kherson in Russia, while giving medicine to sick prisoners there. So highly was he thought of by the Russian Emperor Alexander, that a monument was raised in his memory and it stands there today in honor of his work for the whole world."

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By Helen Rowland

WHO is so susceptible as a man that hath reached his middorties?

Verily, my Daughter, at five-and-forty, doth a man arrive at the Age of Digression, when his eye beginneth to rove and his feet to roam, and he heareth the "last call" of Youth in his ears!

When he taketh note of his first gray hairs and his full-blown waistline, and resolveth that the time hath come to devote himself to something more "inspiring" than mere Business.

When he purchaseth a hair-tonic and delighteth to adorn himself in red-spotted neckties and white golf knickers.

When his silver wedding anniversary calleth to his mind all the "golden opportunities" he hath let pass, and he wondereth what he hath been MISSING!

When he remembereth that "no man can be a boy, forever," and turneth over a new leaf so as to see is "interesting" upon the other side.

When he waketh to the knowledge that Spring hath bidden him adieu—but that Indian Summer beckoneth him to "one last fling!"

Then doth he seek a DETOUR from the Beaten Path, and a signpost to the Primrose Way, and dally along the road that he may not miss any of the scenery!

Then is he as a small boy that followeth a circus parade, nor heedeth where he goeth! Yea, as a babe that crosseth Broadway at a busy hour he needeth a policeman to guard him!

And, lo, the hour of the Love Rites and the Man-Tamers, and the seekers of Easy Marks is at hand! For he is irresistible!

His susceptibility is more touching than a "Mother song," and his simplicity more tempting that the ripe fruit that hangeth over the garden wall.

And NO woman can resist his pathetic appeal!

But, his wife is filled with dismay, and "wondereth what hath happened to him!" She calleth him "cuckoo."

Yet, let not her heart be troubled. For, she hath but to stand aside and wait patiently until the fever hath passed and his sanity hath returned. And, behold, he will show up, again, for his favorite omelet—and the aspirin.

For, the Age of Digression is but a temporary derangement, and cannot last forever!

COOK-COOS

Hollywood High School has just issued a bulletin, "Hollywood One Hundred Thousand Years Ago," by Emily Barker Carter, instructor of history.

The bulletin is very interesting. For instance, it says wild animals were attracted to Hollywood 10,000 years ago.

• • •

"It is conjectured," writes Miss Carter, "that they were attracted by water."

• • •

That, of course, is merely conjecture.

• • •

"It is interesting to note," she continues, "that the skeleton of the true camel is also found."

• • •

She hastens to add that the true camel is now extinct on this continent.

• • •

As early as 1542, insists Miss Carter, many groups of natives were found in the Hollywood district, "wearing scarcely no clothes."

• • •

This is somewhat of a tribute to Cecil de Mille, in that it reveals a certain fidelity on his part, to historical precedent.

Mary had a little ryd,
Its kick was like a mule;
And everywhere that Mary went
She acted like a fool.

She staggered down the street one day;
The people laughed with glee
To see a pretty little miss
Like Mary on a spree.

They haled poor Mary into court;
The judge was stout and hale.
Said he: "The penalty of rum
Is thirty days in jail."

As Mary zigzagged to her cell
She gave the judge a wink
And said: "Of dear, I think teh time
We had a lil drink."

Of course not, sed Pa, & I do not intend to let you, seven if you wanted to, sed Pa. I haf been at the Hellum for many years, sed Pa, & I haf kep our fambly ship from sinking, sed Pa, half I not?

What does it mean, the Hellum? I sed.

It means the front of the ship, Bobbie, sed Pa. The ackwest is on the first dillabel, Bobbie, sed Pa, but the noabel husbands & fathers of this grate land go rite along, Bobbie, sed Pa, bering thare burdens & hiding thare greefs, sed Pa.

The poor deer things, sed Ma. How pittyful.

You need not be sarcastick, sed Pa, it is kind of pittyful at that, sed Pa, to see the husbands coming hoam each nite bent with toil but nevver making a kick, sed Pa.

I have always Been used to luxury. My deer father had plenty sed Ma. She was gitting kind of red in the face.

He sed he had plenty, sed Pa, but a grate deal of Ha-leaf calm from that old bird, sed Pa, wen I asked him for yure hand in padlock, I mean wedlock, sed Pa kind of quick.

How silly, sed Ma. I had any number of chances to wed, sed Ma. But you seemed to need a hoam so badly, sed Ma, that I felt soory for you, Ma sed.

I aint very old but I know quite a lot about wimmen, thay nevver let thare husbands know that they owe thare husbands any thanks for marrying them. I supposa that is the calm line I will git for my wife if I ever haf a wife wich I aint sure about, I will not worry about no wife yet, sufflehunt unto the day is the evil thereof, that is a line I larned in Sunday skool, I guess it is about the only line I larned there.

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

VOICING THE GREAT DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

SAMUEL CURTIS, JR., Radio Editor

'SANDY' LEADS RADIO STARS IN VOTE

Today we print the first list of the votes cast in the Boston Evening American Radio Popularity Contest. In the list will be found only those entertainers who have received fifty or more votes.

It can readily be seen that the admirers of Sandy MacFarlane have been busy with the shears and have clipped and mailed enough ballots to give him a comfortable lead.

However, there is still one week to go before the close of the contest and the present leader may well not look so comfortable unless his friends continue to show the whole-hearted interest they did during the first few days of the race for second place so far is exceedingly close. There are Jimmy Gallagher, leader of the Checker Inn orchestra, and Bob Emery of Big Brother fame. Chief McArdle is not far behind either of these two gentlemen and it is between these three that a keen battle is brewing.

The leader of the group entertainers are the Nine Skippers with a vote of 127, the Bay State Quartette, the Sparkling Diamonds and Eager's Orchestra Players follow in that order. As you well know the persons or persons who received the largest number of votes as the most popular Radio Broadcaster will be tendered by Manager Joseph Brennan of Loew's State Theatre, a contract at a substantial salary to appear for one week at his theatre.

There is nothing for one to do except to cut out the ballot on this page and insert the name of the individual or organization from whose broadcasting the reader has received the greatest amount of joy and entertainment then mail it to the radio contest editor.

There is no limit to the number of votes that one may cast for his favorite, so get busy and help him secure an engagement on the coast. State where you can then see him in person.

Votes cast for Most Popular Radio Broadcaster up to Saturday, 5 p. m., Sandy MacFarlane 1,000
Jimmy Gallagher 176
Bob Emery 170
Chief McArdle 160
Black Bros. Quartette 127
Buck O'Brien 116
Bell Center and George Jay 115
Bay State Quartette 88
Bob Eisenbrandt 84
Billy Oxley 81
Sparkling Diamonds 62
Eager's Orchestral Players 51

The following represents only the individuals who have received 50 or more votes.

Radio Queries

Q—A. J., Peabody, Mass., Will you please tell me how I can tell whether the 4-tube Amrad Inductrole No. 3500-3 is reflex or regenerative? I got this from Texas, last Friday on phones, but couldn't get the volume on loudspeaker. What might be the trouble?

A.—This receiver is neither reflex or regenerative. It consists of a single stage of untuned radio frequency amplification, a non-regenerative detector, and two stages of audio frequency amplification. The Amrad factory tells me that this receiver was designed primarily for the old UV200 type of detector tube. Many users of it do not wish to buy for detectors, complain of poor results. A potentiometer is provided on the set so that the amplification may be brought up to the regeneration point, although the set should not be operated at this point. When the little switch on the panel is placed in position number one, your set is functioning as a single circuit receiver, and only one of the basketball variometers are in circuit. With the switch on position number two, you have the primary and tuned circuit variometer as the secondary. Your lack of volume in the loudspeaker would be due to a poor amplifier B battery or some defect in your speaker itself. Perhaps you have a power amplifier tube in the set.

Q—L. G. H., Chelsea, Will you please tell me the proper way to connect the batteries in my set? I notice that some sets have the minus A connected to the ground, while others have both minus A and minus B connected together. Which is the better way?

A.—In most of the tuned radio frequency sets you will find the minus A and minus B connected together, whereas in regenerative sets the positive A and minus B are generally together. It really makes little difference which way it is done. Simplicity in wiring is usually what is aimed for. When positive A and minus B are together the voltage is increased by the A battery voltage in addition.

G—M. C. B., Boston, I have a "Marwal Jewell" 5-tube set, using silvertone tubes with a storage battery. I also have a C battery in the set. I cannot get any high wave stations above WEEI. When I go for distance on the low wavelengths I can get them all over the map. There is a continuous noise like in a boiler factory. Can you explain this? My antenna is 120 feet long. I have succeeded in clearing up a few stations as Chicago and WJAZ in Akron, Ohio. Have also picked up Memphis, Tenn., Florida, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Davis, New York and Providence. All these stations were on low wavelengths. Can you help me?

A.—Poor reception on the low waves is caused by congestion between the great number of stations which use those waves. This cannot be blamed on your set. I am inclined to think that poor conditions have been mostly to blame for your not being able to pick up high wavelengths.

"WREO," REO STATION, IS HEARD ON SUBMARINE

Radio Station WREO, of the Reo Motor Car Company, Lansing, Michigan, has recently notified of the fact that it was the most distant station heard by the new giant submarine, the U. S. S. V-3, during its test cruise off Key West, Fla.

In the Southern waters, the V-3 was trying out the numerous improvements incorporated in its design. Most important of these features are those which permit the giant underwater craft to descend to a depth of two hundred feet.

It was during these tests that the V-3 heard WREO, and WREO was the farthest station from the point of the submarine's position picked up. Reception was reported as being very fair.

HARVARD ALUMNI TO HEAR OWN ORCHESTRA ON AIR

The Harvard Alumni Orchestra will broadcast from WBZI tonight at 10:30 o'clock. The concert is to be put on the air at that late hour so as to afford graduates who live out of the distance a better opportunity to "tune in." Jacques Hoff, man of the Boston Symphony will conduct.

WHAT THE CONTEST IS

The Boston Evening American's Radio Popularity Contest is a medium through which all radio listeners may DO something for their favorite radio artist.

The artist or group which receives the greatest number of votes is to be given a week's engagement at Loew's State Theatre at a substantial salary. This is naturally a prize quite worthwhile to the artist.

It is a well-known fact that MOST of the radio audience DO NOT send applause cards to their favorite artists.

A vote in this contest is an applause card that your artist will especially appreciate.

Therefore, why not vote? DO IT NOW!

My favorite local radio artist is.....

Heard through station.....

Send votes to Radio Contest Editor, Boston Evening American.

NEW ORCHESTRA OVER WBZ

Station WBZ offers a new feature on its programs in the Empire Stringing Orchestra, under the direction of Fred Lamaze, which makes its initial appearance as a regular attraction from this station at 9:30 o'clock tonight. At this hour each Monday evening the orchestra will be entrained with as hour's program of symphonic dance music interspersed with vocal numbers of members of the group.

Mr. Adams has selected instruments particularly adapted to broad casting in arranging this series of radio programs. The dance team includes violin, flute, two saxophones E flat alto saxophone, B flat tenor saxophone, banjo, tuba, and piano.

Although this orchestra has been heard by radio fans during the past few months, tonight's broadcast marks the first of the series of weekly dance programs that have been arranged. All of the programs already broadcast by this orchestra were well received.

At 8 o'clock, the Little Screen Players will present "Betty's Suitor," by Harold R. Schreiner, the second of their series of one-act playlets. The cast that will present this comedy includes Dorothy Fowle, Malcolmson Harvey, Zaidee P. Burgess, and Gertrude L. Ingalls.

The early periods of the evening offer the weekly concerts from the Capitol Theatre, organ and orchestral selections and a joint recital by Virginia Wallace McGuiley, soprano, and T. Mahoney, baritone. Leo Reisman's Popular Hotel Brunswick Orchestra, the closing feature of the evening's broadcast from WBZ, with a half-hour program of requested dance numbers.

NO RADIO INTERFERENCE FROM NAVY YARD

As a result of the test conducted recently by the Charlestown Navy Yard, Station WBFA, the Corporation and Telephone & Telegraph Co., and local broadcasting stations, it was found that out of 4135 letters received at the yard, only 171 stated that there was interference in the transmitter.

This would indicate that the Navy Yard is no longer to be considered as a source of code interference, especially perhaps the comparatively few people living near the yard and Bunker Hill.

The cleaning up of this nuisance is directly due to the thoughtful consideration of Admiral Philip Andrews, Commandant of the yard, and Capt. Ingersoll, district Comdr. C. A. Candwell, district communication superintendent, who supervised the test.

UNITED DRUG SETS RECORD

Not only did the United Drug Co. in the first three months of this year break all sales records for any first quarter but the improvement was carried right down through the balance sheet. Sales in United States of $21,850,748 represented an increase of $3,218,252 over the same 18 per cent., over the corresponding three months of last year. Measured against 1924 the increase is almost $5,000,000, or an expansion of very close to 30 per cent.

Out of every dollar of sales the past quarter close to 10 cents was saved for net profits, against 7.8 cents saved for net profits on every dollar in the first quarter of last year. Final net profit, therefore, of $2,181,000 represented an increase of $738,112 over the $1,410,533 reported in 1924, or an increase of 52 per cent.

True it is that in the past quarter a large income was received by United Drug on its English investment. Other income this year, consisting largely of income from foreign investments amounted to $285,464, an increase of $172,739 compared with a year ago. Yet deducting this income for the moment, it is seen that net profits of United Drug during the country showed an increase of over 40 per cent.

In reality the United Drug Co. refutes the old adage that "one swallow doesn't make a summer." This first six months' period was one of the poorest part of the calendar period. The business is split about 60 per cent.—40 per cent., the last six months of every year always contributing the larger portion of total sales and profits. Therefore, while United Drug reported sales in United States at the end of 1925 of $86,000,000, the final 1925 result should be materially higher and top the $90,000,000 mark by a big margin.

After interest charges and the period's dividend of 1% per cent. on the $33,000,000 preferred stock, final profit balance the past quarter was $1,343,495. This is equivalent to $3.81 a share on the 352,700 shares of common.

Wall Street Gossip

"OUR earning for year ended June 30 should show about $20 a share on our 1,000,000 shares of common," said Lee Shubert, on departing for Europe.

"FOR 1926 our earnings should run around $8,000,000, or about $7.50 a share," said Marcus Loew, head of Loew's, Inc., on eve of departure for Europe.

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Chicago, May 3.—Sturdy business leaders of the Middle West, accustomed to overcoming obstacles and achieving big results, have not been frightened into pessimism by the recent Wall Street flurry. These leaders have wrought industrial miracles because of their unconquerable faith, their never-failing courage, their unshakable confidence in the progress and the destiny of this country—and especially of their own go-getting Middle West and their own still-more-go-getting Chicago.

This same spirit reigns today.

Bankers habitually conservative are disposed to be a trifle cautious.

The Insull brothers, Samuel and Martin, are now recognized as the driving power behind the largest and most progressive business developments in the Middle West. They are classed as utility boys. But they are much more. They have been permitted to take hold of industrial and other enterprises needing attention or affording opportunity for achievement. Samuel has just been appearing before the House of Commons in London to give them needed pointers on things electrical.

Martin J. is here, and, in course of our talk, said:

"From reports received from the various operating subsidiaries of the Middle West Utilities Company, scattered from Maine to West Texas, and from the Mexican to the Canadian borders, other than a natural retard in business due to unseasonable weather, business conditions are good, and the outlook for more business as the year goes forward is encouraging.

"There are, of course, some spots where conditions seem less favorable than others, but these seem to be largely in the Eastern States, although in New England the textile industry shows some slight improvement. In the Southwest, due to heavy rains, and in the North, due to cold weather, spring planting is late; however, the delay is not considered serious, and crop reports across the country are very generally optimistic.

"I would seem that financial conditions are favorable to increased business, and what falling off there has been, if any, is due largely to the late Spring and to 'mob psychology' as a result of possibly ill-advised statements that have been appearing in the past few months as to the falling off in business.

"Business is very much affected by how we think it is. Let's think good business since fundamental conditions seem to indicate that way."

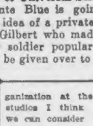
Lillian Gish



D. W. Griffith

LILLIAN GISH, who raced to the coast and on to London to get her mother's bedside, has cabled friends that Mrs. Gish's condition is still very serious. The mother of the whole motion picture industry is with Lillian, and Dorothy, and everywhere one hears a hope expressed that Mrs. Gish will soon be able to return to this country.

"SQUEALER" IN DANGER IN SING SING PRISON

New York, May 3 (A.P.)—Sing Sing officials today were under consideration a transfer to another penal institution of Isadore Presser, who guards asserted last week, was ordered rescinded by Governor Smith.

Because Presser has been branded as a "rat" by his fellow prisoners on account of the disclosure that he "turned up" a drug ring in the Auburn prison, the authorities fear he might not be safe at Sing Sing.

The parole board will meet at Ossining Wednesday to pass formally on a recommendation of Commissioner Lawes that Presser be paroled.

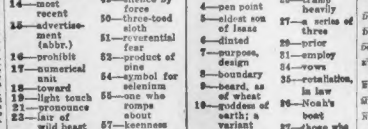
ANSWER TO PUZZLE NO. 191



Monte Blue to Play Role of Soldier

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, May 3.—Monte Blue is going to have an opportunity to present his idea of a private in the United States army. But unlike Jack Gilbert who made the common garden variety of World War soldier popular in "The Big Parade," Mr. Blue's talents will be given over to a picturization of the Spanish-American War.

Warner Brothers, who are planning to film the story of the Battle of Manila, the sinking of the Maine, the bombarding of Morro Castle and other historical incidents on a large scale have handed the pictorial job to Roy Del Ruth.

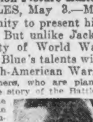
Monte Blue

While it is not certain that Halstead's story of the Philippines will furnish the background, at least the characters introduced in that tale will figure in the Warner opus.

Among the most important characters are General Frederick Funston, Admiral Dewey and Theodore Roosevelt, who as the Rough Rider, became known as a daring fighter. It will be interesting to see who will be called upon to portray these heroes of 1898.

Darryl Francis Zanuck, I am told, is preparing the scenario and work will be started very shortly.

F. D. W. Griffith wants to produce "An American Tragedy" there is no one at the Famous Players-Lasky studios who will stand in the way. P. P. Schulberg says Mr. Griffith had been promised the story and that Jesse L. Lasky had no intention of taking it away from him. Mr. Schulberg further more stated no effort is being made to get the story.



D. W. Griffith

Griffith had been made with Theodore Dreiser, the author, whereby he could choose the director or dictate in the making of the picture.

It would be ridiculous for us to promise to film any book exactly as it is written," said Mr. Schulberg.

I have heard it whispered that Monty Bell is eager to make "An American Tragedy," but Mr. Schulberg would not admit that Mr. Bell had been considered.

THE juggling for Alan Crosland's services as director ceased Saturday when Crosland signed a contract to direct two pictures for United Artists with John Barrymore as the star. And rumor notwithstanding, the first Barrymore picture will not be decided on until Jos. M. Schenck returns from New York. He may have a few ideas on the subject himself.

Which reminds me that Mr. Schenck and Norma Talmadge (Mrs. Jos. M. Schenck) will not return to Los Angeles for several more weeks.

WHEN a man of Alexander Moore's brains and ability admits he is impressed with the organization at the motion picture studios I think we can consider our industry has been paid a big compliment.

Mr. Moore, former ambassador to Spain, arrived in Los Angeles Friday morning and by night had visited about eight studios because it was the first opportunity he had to see the film wheels go round. I was interested to hear him say he considered the carpenters the most important people at the studios.

"The carpenters," said Mr. Moore, when I met him at a dinner given in his honor by Marshall Neilan and Blanche Sweet, "are the Michael Angelos of the screen."

MARION DAVIES didn't get a chance after all to walk until Monday to report to Mr. Goldwyn.

An Open Letter to the Chief Executive of the Republic

Dear Mr. President:

The letter you have received from Miss Helen Maloney of Brooklyn embodies at once a just criticism and a wonderful idea.

She expressed dissatisfaction, you will remember, with the way the government treats girls.

She thinks girls are just as important to this country as boys and should receive the same opportunities from the government that boys do. And of course she is right in that.

She observes that the government trains thousands of boys free every summer at Citizens' Training Camps, teaching them to hike, swim, shoot and take care of themselves; also developing their health and self reliance.

And she wants to know why there shouldn't be government free training camps for girls, too.

Candidly, Mr. President, why shouldn't there?

When there is a war, the officials have to call upon the women—everybody helps. The women go to the front as nurses, ambulance drivers, hostesses, entertainers, maintainers of morale, and aid in every other possible way. Consequently even from the military point of view it is desirable to have training camps for girls.

But in addition there is the phase of physical development, which is the more important because it is equally effective in peace or war.

Miss Maloney asks if the men are to have a monopoly on physical advantages. We think that there is no man who would say that they should.

Yet there is only one way in which such a monopoly can be avoided in the government's plan for fitting its citizenship for their duties and responsibilities, and that is by giving equal training to both sexes.

It would cost very little and the measure of benefit that it would bring would be immense.

The congress is now in session. Would it not be easy to bring this matter to its immediate attention?

Learning by Experience

Norman Hapgood, discussing the wet and dry debate, hit constitutional prohibition a telling blow when he cited the absurdity of 120,000,000 people forbidding themselves to learn by experience.

It is only by experience that democracies progress—by trial, error and the good sense then to take a new tack.

In behalf of the 120,000,000 Americans affected by the Eighteenth Amendment it should be said that many didn't realize how rigid a police law becomes when imbedded into a national charter.

They wanted temperance. They were through with the iniquities of the saloon. And at the moment they were impatient. Hence they allowed themselves to be rushed.

But even this is an experience from which they are learning. They will find a way around or out. Wayne Wheeler's chortle that the amendment is final is premature.

The recent hearings at Washington have had one good effect. They have made clear that the only basis of intelligent legislation is, not to stand pat, but to find, face and respect the facts.

There is no panacea for human frailty. Ideals cannot be made effective by compulsion. At best, law, when wise, can only assist education and conscience.

Static law becomes oppressive in an age of change. It must be renewed and modified to keep pace with human experience.

The militant desire of foes of the saloon to prevent its return is understandable and creditable.

What is not so creditable is the unwillingness of some of them to see that ultra prohibition merely makes a bad matter worse.

Prophets expect as the first result of those Senate hearings a tightening of the processes of prohibition enforcement.

Yet no tightening can ever suppress the instinctive revolt of millions of citizens against what they deem an immoral infringement upon their liberty.

Education and suasion might in time win some of them to abstinence and most of them to temperance, but compulsion is certain to fail.

If it takes more time to impress this lesson upon the country, there is plenty of time.

But it is none too early for true friends of temperance, foreseeing, as they must, the final futility of compulsion, to get their minds agreed upon a substitute policy when compulsion ends in chaos.

No Haven Here

America Owes No Duty to Harbor Alien Crooks

A new policy toward alien crooks is demanded in the public interest. It is foreshadowed in a bill just endorsed by the House Committee on Immigration.

The new deportation bill includes all the old offenders and adds such new ones as aliens convicted of carrying concealed weapons, aliens found harboring or abetting the smuggling of other aliens save next of kin, convicted alien bootleggers sentenced to a year or more in prison, and all aliens of the prostitute class, the surreptitious entry class and the pedlars of narcotics.

It cannot be argued that to deport any of these after due proof of guilt would be an act of intolerance.

It would be simply a just and prudent return of undesirables.

Our nation should be hospitable and generous to worthy immigrants to the fullest extent of its capacity to assimilate and make them comfortable.

But it owes no duty of harborage to alien crooks.

Make It Absolute :-: By O. P. Williams

▲ MESSAGE from London credits Mr. Morgan's shipping company with planning "effective competition with British lines" if it can "buy the United States Lines at an extremely low figure."

This may be truth or it may be merely propaganda.

But it can be taken as assured truth that any sale of Uncle Sam's ships without ABSOLUTE assurance that those ships will REMAIN under our flag and available for national defense in the event of war would create a storm of resentment which no Administration could weather.

The day has passed when the United States was willing to play second fiddle in shipping or owe its protection to any other power.

This is the day of "America First."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

THIS is the story of Moses and those he led into the wilderness so long ago.

"So Moses brought Israel from the Red Sea; and they went out into the wilderness of Shur; and they went three days in the wilderness and found no water.

"And when they came to Marah, they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter; therefore, the name of it was called Marah.

"And the people murmured against Moses, saying 'What shall we drink?'

"And he cried unto the Lord; and the Lord showed him a tree, which when he cast into the waters, the waters were made sweet—And there he proved them."—Exodus xv, 22, 26.

That is the story of Moses.

And the story is of you and me.

Sooner or later each life goes into the wilderness.

It may be a wilderness of fear and discouragement, of hunger and pain, of broken hope and lost love, of poverty or hate, or the bleached acres of spiritual despair.

Or it may be the wilderness of satiety—the wilderness of those who have so much that they lose taste for everything. Which is, perhaps, the most desolate wilderness of all.

But whatever the wilderness, it waits for each one of us.

The way is hard. Our bodies talk and work and eat with other men. We do our tasks in our accustomed way. But our real selves are in the wilderness. No sound can reach us there—no hand can touch us. We are like blind, dumb spirits drifting on the winds. We see no aim or meaning to it all—no reason why. There is no end, no exit, from this place of dead desire.

So at last we come to that small, arid pool which we have fed by our own sweat and tears. The pool of Marah, that last, bitter cup which those who cross the wilderness must drink.

But we cannot drink.

Our souls are parched with thirst —we cry aloud in torment for relief—but still we cannot drink of Marah's bitter cup.

And then God proves us, as He proved those wandering tribes.

If sometime in the happier future years we have sown seed which in its turn has made a healthy growth—

If love and courage have grown tall within our lives and made a refuge like a strong green tree—

Then the clean branches of that growth which we ourselves have sown will be a solace to us in our time of need. They will sweeten the waters of Marah as love and courage have always sweetened despair.

All those forgotten kindly things which once we dreamed — all the noble dreams we dreamed—all the courageous decisions we have made and the brave risks we ran for the sake of truth or tenderness—they will stand by us like a sturdy tree, and their own healthiness will make the waters of our life alive once more. They will reason us from the bitterness of our despair. They will take the salt out of our tears and the acid from our sweat.

But if no gracious growth has risen in our lives—

If we have only lived for each day's selfish need, and reached no branches toward a golden sky—

Then we must wander until truth at last shall see, and pity break the hard soil of our souls, and love strike roots into that riven soil and from that love there grows a taller soul.

Then will its living greenness make our Marah sweet.

And give us strength to cross the desert sands.

Mussolini and Coolidge

PREMIER MUSSOLINI of Italy visited Tripoli, his purpose being to demonstrate the naval power of Italy, to show its naval forces and to emphasize the value of Italy's colonial possessions.

He said: "I wish you to render homage to our glorious navy in which are based our hopes for the future, and I want you to become familiar with the instruments of war."

Compare this with President Coolidge's recent speech before the newspaper men of America in which he emphasized the fact that the United States seeks to expand its influence and power by reason and not by force.

The President declared that the destiny of a country was favorable in proportion as it relied upon the truth, and not upon might.

Nothing could better show the differences between autocracy upon the one hand and democracy upon the other than these respective attitudes of Mussolini and Coolidge.

UNKNOWN QUANTITY GIVES VALUE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

IT is always the x value in anything that ultimately gives it its importance.

You cannot define what it is about a certain girl that attracts you. We say it is personality, which is another way of saying we don't know what it is. It is "something."

It is this same unknown quality that leads a man to success in business. It is not his knowledge of the rules or his adherence to them. It is something about him that makes him succeed, and we vaguely call it business acumen or shrewdness. Nobody knows what it is, the successful man least of all.

It has been a recent discovery in medical science that the vitamines are of paramount importance in foods; that is to say, it is not so much how much carbohydrates, proteins or fats you eat, but it is how much vitamines they contain. These vitamines are a very elusive something and we do not yet exactly understand them, but we do know that they give lettuce, tomatoes and oranges, for instance, their value. Spinach, which has little real sustaining power, has many vitamines.

It is this something about a person that makes him a good pianist, or violinist, or singer.

It is the something about a man that we call style that makes him an interesting writer.

That which gives a thing its ultimate value is always an unknown quantity. We do not know what electricity is, but we do know that it is of importance and it can be used.

So is the matter of studies. One man will excel in languages and another in mathematics, and why they do this no one knows except that each has a sort of flair for his particular calling.

You can give a person all the regulations you can think of, but he will not succeed unless he has this "something" or x value which we vaguely call common sense or a talent, but which, after all, determines how far he shall go.

The great problem before us all, after all is said and done, is to find the value of x. Whoever shall solve this will find the answer to the human equation.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Men are never very wise and select in the exercise of a new power. —Channing.

The mind begins to boggle at unnatural substances as things paradoxical and incomprehensible. —South

Necessity is the plea for every infringement of human freedom. It is the argument of tyrants; it is the creed of slaves. —Pitt.

There is no life of a man, faithfully recorded, but is a heroic poem of its sort, rhymed or unrhymed. —Carlyle.

If there is anything good about nobility it is that it enforces the necessity of avoiding degeneracy. —Boethius.

It is better to believe that a man does possess good qualities than to assert that he does not.—Davis.

Pain is no longer pain when it is past.—Preston.

Wealth and Fashion---Fine

But Lasting Affection and Matrimonial Success Are Better

THIS CHARMING YOUNG WOMAN, MRS. GLORIA GOULD BISHOP, RETURNS TO PARIS HAVING, IT IS SAID, ESTABLISHED A "DIVORCE RESIDENCE" THERE.

It is pleasant to have a great deal of money.

It is VERY pleasant to be more or less fashionable, more or less in "real society." It is agreeable to have big automobiles, police dogs, maids, butlers, valets, French chefs, French dressmakers; to get your picture in the paper twice a week with your smile and your silk stockings showing, and all the rest of it.

All of those things the young and charming Gloria Gould Bishop possesses.

But thousands of young women that possess NONE of those things, but that have husbands with whom they are satisfied and in love, husbands that are satisfied with them, would not change places with the beautiful young Mrs. Bishop, not if she had ALL the money in the world, all the POLICE DOGS in the world, and all the strings of pearls in the world.

There are some things better, more important than money, fashion, notoriety, society, pearls, or a foolish feeling of self-importance.

And the MOST important of them is a happy married life, a husband or a wife upon whom you can rely, with whom you are satisfied, and in whom YOU HAVE CONFIDENCE.

Let nobody envy this young woman her Paris "divorce residence," although it is "the latest fashion" in the "fashionable set," they say. It may be THE fashion, but it is not a HAPPY fashion.

The kind of "freedom" that is found through the doors of divorce courts is not freedom, but the miserable badge of unhappiness.

MEET THE WORLD ALWAYS WITH A GOOD FRONT

Don't let the sag of your shoulders, your spiritless voice and your lusterless eyes be apparent if you want to gain prestige in a business world.

In other words, meet the world with a good front.

Your appearance is sometimes all you have in the world to sell. You won't be able to impress those who do not know your ability unless you brace up.

A prospective employer wants spirit, vigor, initiative.

He wants real and satisfactory service from the men he hires.

If you are listless, discouraged, despondent, you won't meet requirements.

On the other hand, don't overdo your efforts to impress your employer.

Don't talk fast and unthinkingly or he will be afraid to trust you with the full information you should have as an employe.

Don't go around with a pop-eyed look in your effort to appear wide-awake. Don't make movements that are inefficient and ineffectual.

Meet squarely the gaze of the men to whom you talk.

If your opinion is asked, don't hedge—trying to please.

Back up your honest opinion by sound logical argument, and be natural.

'You Said It, Marceline!'

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

On "WATCH THE FLAME"

LADIES IN LOVE are Like tall COLORED CANDLES.
When FIRST they are Lighted, they look SO
Regal, so ALOOF and
SO BEAUTIFUL that a man
Thinks AN ALTAR is the Right place for them and
He starts to WORSHIP.
But LATER, after several Years of BEING MARRIED,
If they begin to Lose their SLENDERNESS,
HE comes down to EARTH and sometimes
Becomes either critical or INDIFFERENT.
Under the cool winds
The FLAME in a woman's Heart is APT to FLICKER.
THIS IS THE CRISIS.
If he GUARDS it gently
And voices his appreciation
Of all she has MEANT
To him, she burns STEADILY
And quietly to THE END.
But a man who SNUFFS OUT
A flame that WANTS to Go ON LOVING—well! he
Has to put up with the Smoke and ashes.
